Democratic platform uncontroversial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter wanted a noncontroversial campaign program that would offend neither the left nor right in the Democratic party, and the party's platform committee has given it to him.

If Carter wins his party's nomination for President in July, as expected, he'll run on a platform that should go a long way toward uniting his party behind him. There was so little disagreement in two day's of meetings that ended Tuesday that the platform panel adjourned a day early.

"It's the first time in 16 years that the Democratic party has been so united," said a jubilant Stuart Eizenstat, the Atlanta attorney who was Carter's top representative on the committee.

He said there was nothing in the 89-pageplatform that Carter couldn't support. But he quickly added, "This is a Democratic party document, not a Jimmy Carter document."

The key features of the platform are support for a national health insurance program, minimum income guarantees for all poor Americans, a program for full employment in three years and a strong national defense while also pursuing detente with our "traditional adversaries."

All spending programs would be phased in gradually, and only as the nation returned to full employment. If there is not a return to full employment, then the programs would not be fully implemented, party spokesmen have said.

There was no breakdown on what the individual programs would cost, but party officials have said the cost of all the programs, excluding national health insurance, would be about $30 billion.

Party spokesmen say that the cost of the national health insurance program — to be financed through a combination of an employe-employer payroll tax and general revenues — would not exceed the $130 billion now being spent on health and medical care in the United States.

The delegates approved a proposal to delay any decision on production of the controversial B1 bomber until February 1977 at the earliest, a proposal that is before the House this week.

The unity on the 153-member platform committee was never more evident than after it handed the Carter forces their only significant defeat — approval of a proposal favoring a general pardon for persons who opposed the Vietnam war.

Supporters of the general pardon, after winning the vote, followed up with an amendment that would provide that pardons for deserters be considered on a case-by-case basis. Carter forces embraced the conciliatory gesture.

The platform committee easily defeated proposals to legalize marijuana and measures advocated by gay rights groups. Platform statements on busing and abortion did not go beyond simple expressions of support for court decisions on these highly controversial issues.

Mayor John Poelker of St. Louis, an uncommitted member, said the Carter supporters brought pressures on delegates to influence key votes, but he added that most delegates appeared willing to cooperate, not wanting another election-day debacle like that of 1972.

"We're in much better shape because the various constituencies of the party were willing to give on both sides to come up with a platform that a candidate can support without behing hurt by it," he said.

Rep. Yvonne Burke of California, a supporter of California Gov. Edmund G. Brown and who frequently advocated a more liberal stance on issues, said Carter representatives "did some pushing, but they needed to push.

The platform is still subject to formal approval by the Democratic National Convention in New York in July, but it is unlikely there will be substantial changes.

In the pardon showdown, the committee voted 55 to 44 on a roll call vote to support a general pardon for persons in legal or financial difficulty because of peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war.

U.S. ambassador in Lebanon is missing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr. disappeared today while crossing the dangerous front line between Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors and was feared kidnaped, the U.S. Embassy reported.

Meloy, who arrived in this war-torn city last month, was on his way for his first meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis in the Christian-held Hasmiyeh district. He left the seaside U.S. Embassy in the Moslem sector of Beirut in his bullet-proof Chevrolet.

Embassy spokesman Christofer Ross said he was escorted part of the way by an embassy guard car. But the car left him and economic attache Robert O. Waring with embassy chauffeur Zoheir Moghbrabi to continue the crossing in the ambassador's car.

Unconfirmed reports said Meloy, Waring and the driver were kidnaped by two armed gunmen. The embassy refused to comment except to confirm Meloy and the two others were missing.

Several persons have been kidnaped, robbed and set free in the area in recent days. The Moslem side of the area is held by several Palestinian and Lebanese militias and groups of the Palestine Liberation Army.

On the Christian side are gunmen from the Phalangist and National Liberal party's Tiger militia. Militias on both sides reportedly were participating in the search for the missing ambassador.

Meloy was to see Sarkis at 11 a.m. — 4 a.m. EDT — the embassy said. Lebanese journalists quoted officials in Sarkis' entourage saying the president-elect telephoned the embassy to inquire about Meloy's whereabouts three hours after he was scheduled to arrive.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman confirmed that Meloy and Waring "have been missing since late Wednesday morning ...

Carlson said the wife of Meloy's chauffeuer received a telephone call that the chauffeur had been kidnaped.

President Ford learned of Meloy's disappearance from his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, shortly after 8 a.m. EDT, after the embassy in Beirut called Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Scowcroft.

Asked about unconfirmed reports that U.S. troops and planes were gathering at a British base on Cyprus, Carlson said he knew nothing about it. Defense officials said there are no U.S. troops on Cyprus.

Planning commission gives nod to proposed Section 8 housing

The city Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday voted to recommend the rezoning of a lot on the corner of South New Madrid Street and Kathleen Avenue for a proposed 28-unit housing complex for the elderly.

Half of the property was zoned multiple-family and half was zoned commercial. The developers, GCA Corp., asked the commission to recommend to the City Council that the multiple-family zoning be changed to commercial.

The developers are asking the Department of Housing and Urban Development for permission to construct Section 8 Housing. The housing would be built by the developers and managed by the Sikeston Housing Authority.

HUD reportedly can allow 40 Section 8 developments in the state. About five of them are expected to be built in Southeast Missouri.

The request was made because square footage restrictions in the multiple-family zoning were too large for the housing. Multiple-family zoning requires 3,000 square feet of space per unit. Commercial only requires 1,000 square feet.

The development's units will have almost 2,000 square feet.

The development will have a laundry room, community room and hobby room. Hot meals would be served to the residents by the Heritage House kitchen.

City Manager Charles Church said he thought the site would be attractive to HUD because of its proximity to stores, churches and utility offices.

Church told the commissioners the city would only enforce those subdivision restrictions which relate to city ordinances, but not those which do not.

He made the statement in response to a question at a previous commission meeting.

Church said the city does have a section in its building codes that require a fence around a swimming pool.

A question was raised at a previous commission meeting after a commissioner was told a pool was being built in town and the owners did not plan to enclose it.

Church said the code requires fences to be at least four feet tall. A natural barrier may be

Radio, tapes reported stolen

Two thefts from vehicles and a store burglary were reported today by police.

Michael Blissett of Oran Route One reported the theft of a citizens band radio from his car between 10 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday, while it was parked in the parking lot at Malone & Hyde Inc., 1500 W. Malone Ave.

Steve Dupont, 818 Moore Ave., told police that 15 eight- track tapes were taken from his car between Monday and Tuesday while the car was parked at his home. The tapes were valued at $35.

Burglars broke into Bob's Salvage Store, 221 E. Center St., between 5:30 p.m. Monday and 8:25 a.m. Tuesday. Taken were two cartons of cigarettes and 75 to 100 pennies.

Police said the burglars apparently got into the building by breaking a window on the west side of the store.

Vandals arrested

Two juveniles were taken into custody Tuesday afternoon by the Oran Police Department in connection with a break-in Monday night at the Oran Grade School and vandalism estimated between $300 and $500 in damages. Chemicals were thrown on books, school papers, floors and walls and some desks were broken and hanging light fixtures torn down in two separate buildings of the school. Oran Police Chief Lon Buie said there is a possibility that more juveniles were involved. The two arrested Tuesday were released to the custody of their parents.

Ray wins in Lilbourn vote

LILBOURN— Ray Cravens tallied 52 votes to with the west ward aldermanic seat over two opponents in a special election conducted Tuesday to fill an unexpired one-year term.

Other candidates in the race were Sam Dillard, who received 28 votes, and John Pfeffer, who collected four votes.

Cravens, a former west ward alderman, had been defeated April 6 in his bid for re-election. He will now fill the seat vacated by John Baker, who resigned.

Tools taken

ADVANCE — Thieves were busy Tuesday night, breaking into Schneider's Equipment Co. and stealing a citizens band radio from a truck owned by another company, the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department said today.

The equipment company was broken into by forcing open the back door. Five chain saws and numerous other tools were taken.

A CB radio was taken from a truck parked outside the Co-op Service Station in Advance.

Both companies are located on Highway 25.

Health department suggestions for controlling mosquito crop

BENTON — Warren Manning, director of the Scott County Health Department, reported Monday on mosquito control recommendations.

Manning said control measures should be started now before mosquito populations have the opportunity to get out of hand. By eliminating breeding places and destroying larvae, the mosquito population can be controlled most economically, Manning said.

The compelling reason for controlling mosquitoes is to prevent the spread of mosquito-borne encephalitis. Several mosquito-borne viruses causing human encephalitis have occurred in the past in Missouri and could cause many cases in any year. Most encephalitis reports are received from mid-July to mid-October with the major peak in mid-September, Manning added.

He said the mosquitoes primarily involved in carrying encephalitis in Missouri are the culex types which prefer to breed in polluted stagnant water such as sewage drain pipes, sewage lagoons and stagnant pools along intermittent streams and drainage ditches. However, he added they will also breed in artificial containers such as those provided by trash, old tires, fish ponds, etc., around human premises.

While other mosquitoes bite in the daytime, Manning said the culex types prefer to bite from one hour before sunset to one and one half hours after sunset.

Manning said the following time-honored mosquito control measures are again recommended. It should be noted that these are usual measures which should be employed every year—regardless of the number of encephalitis cases being reported—to minimize the number even in low years.

Listed are some recommendations from the health department for personal protection and control of mosquitos:

For personal protection, if possible, stay indoors in the hours immediately before and after sunset; maintain house screens in good repair; and if you must be out of doors, wear long sleeves, trousers or long stockings and use repellents.

Eliminate breeding places, mosquito eggs cannot hatch unless they are in water. Look for standing water on your premises and eliminate it if possible and practical. Some suggested steps to take are: remove unneeded temporary water containers; flatten or dispose of tin cans; place discarded bicycle and automobile tires in places where water cannot get into them.

Fill in tree holes with concrete; see that cisterns, cesspools, septic tanks, fire or rain barrels and tubs in which water is stored are tightly

Bernie okays gas plant

BERNIE — In a light turnout Tuesday, voters approved a $200,000 bond issue to finance a gas peak shaving system for the city by an 8-1 margin.

The final tally was 80 for and 10 against.

The City Council met Tuesday night to open bids on system equipment, but postponed the action until July 6.

The system involves a plant which will mix propane gas with natural gas to insure a sufficient supply of energy during a hard winter.

Mayor R. B. Woods said the city owns its own gas supply system, but buys gas from Texas Eastern Gas Co. and has a quota on the amount of gas provided. A penalty is charged for gas supplied over the quota.

There is a daily quota as well as a yearly quota, and Woods said the city has no problem staying within the daily limits. During an extremely cold winter, however, the yearly limit may be exceeded.

If there is a 10 per cent overrun, then the penalty charged could amount to about $30,000 per year.

Last winter, the city used up its quota of natural gas, even though it was a relatively mild winter. During a more severe winter, the quota could be used up and the city cut off.

The City Council has been considering the matter since last winter.

Woods said the reason for the peak shaving system, rather than just providing the city with propane gas, is that propane gas is heavier than air and natural gas is lighter than air.

If somebody's pilot light were to go out, natural gas would dissipate rapidly, but propane gas could accumulate, increasing the possibility of an explosion.

By mixing the propane and natural gases, the fuel is still light enough that if a pilot light goes out, the danger of gas gathering and exploding is less.

A simple majority of votes cast was required to approve the bond issue.

The city- owned gas company is a money- making proposition, and the system will be paid for through revenue generated by the project. Taxes will not be increased to pay for the system.

Woods said that over the period of a few very cold winters, the system could pay for itself by saving the city from having to pay penalties for gas used over the allowed quota.

FORD VS. REAGAN ON DEFENSE

One week before the crucial California primary, President Ford invited a handful of newsmen from papers in that state into the Oval Office in an apparent attempt to put some distance between him and his hard-running challenger, Ronald Reagan. On the key issue of defense, however — the very issue on which Reagan has scored so heavily with voters — the President failed again to express a realistic view vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

Mr. Ford was asked specifically if he agreed with the surprisingly hard-line assessment made by his Vice President, Nelson Rockefeller, during the latter's recent visit to Frankfurt, Germany. While there, Rockefeller said publicly that the Russians are imperialistically organizing the world "into a new empire on which the Soviet sun never sets." The Vice President added that, in light of the huge growth of the Soviet Navy, "the time is at hand to greatly accelerate the rebuilding of the free world's naval power."

Asked to comment, Mr. Ford said, "I wouldn't agree with the general thrust of that. The Soviet Union has moved in certain areas — Angola being the principal example. They have built a growing navy. It's not a seven-seas but it's a growing problem. We're in the process of expanding, modernizing our navy to meet that challenge, and our naval capability is far stronger than theirs on a world-concept basis."

More disquieting yet than the President's seeming lack of a sense of urgency in countering what many others see as the menace outlined by Rockefeller was this calm follow-up comment by Mr. Ford: "...I think we have to recognize that the Soviet Union has ambitions. We have our own program, our own ambitions; and where they come in conflict, we have to sit down and talk about and try to resvole the problems by negotiation rather than confrontation."

It is difficult to understand how Mr. Ford can equate our "ambitions" with Russia's ambitions — when the latter, from Lenin to Brezhnev, have chiefly centered on the destruction of our system and domination of the world. and, with the Soviet military capability coming closer to synchronization with this oft-stated objective, it is more difficult yet to understand how the President can appear so sanguine about our relations with Moscow.

Mr. Reagan has scored heavily against the President because of a more hard-headed, realistic assessment of the USSR. In a recent interview with U.S. News and World Report, Reagan said: "'The Russians know they can't match us industrially or technologically. But the Soviet Union today apparently is the only country in the world that believes that there could be another war and that there could be a winner of that war."

If America is to be adequately prepared to avert the twin hells of surrender and war, that is the kind of clear trumpet that this country needs to hear from its leader. Mr. Ford, for his own political survival and — more important — the survival of this nation, would do well to heed its call.

STILL CARE-ing

It was on May 11, 1946 that the first CARE package arrived at Le Havre, France, In the 30 years since then, the agency that was born out of the desperate plight of postwar Europe has provided more than $1.9 billion worth of food, emergency relief, medical supplies and self-help services and training to people in 77 nations.

Some 42 million persons in the United States and Canada have given $318 million to CARE, either as individuals or through their organizations. These contributions have been vastly magnified by stretching them out with U.S. agricultural surpluses and local supplies and labor from the recipients themselves. Last year, for example, each dollar donated to CARE was translated into $5.13 worth of aid.

"On our 30th anniversary," says CARE executive director Frank L. Goffio, "we say a profound 'THANK YOU' TO ALL THOSE WHO HAVE SUPPORTED OUR WORK AND WE PLEDGE TO CONTINUE TO SERVE AS A DIRECT CHANNEL FOR PEOPLE TO PEOPLE AID TO RELIEVE THE SUFFERING OF THE WORLD'S NEEDY AND TO HELP THEM BUILD PROGRESS."

JOUST FOR SENATE SEAT FROM STATE AWAITS IN WINGS

Presidential politics and scrambles for power in several U.S. House of Representatives districts in Missouri have put a budding Democratic donnybrook for the U.S. Senate nomination on a temporary hold.

But there are all kinds of signs that the war will be on in earnest as soon as the presidential primaries are over in mid-June, political sources say.

EACH OF THE major contestants has his own battle:

Rep. James W. Symington of St. Louis County faces accusations from some of his opponents of "daddyism" and "snobbishness" in his effort to succeed his father, Sen. Stuart Symington.

Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has been wrangling with federal authorities over a long investigation into alleged corruption surrounding his years as governor of Missouri.

Rep. Jerry Litton, millionaire cattle rancher from Chillicothe in northwestern Missouri, is probably not known by more than a handful of voters in each St. Louis area precinct.

MAYOR CHARLES B. Wheeler of Kansas City, once a candidate for the Democratic vice presidential nomination before he decided to opt for the Senate seat, is in a war with Kansas City unions growing out of a firemen's strike some months ago.

Thus, each of the major candidates has been fighting his own battle up to now, with only an occasional jab at opponents for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Litton has worked hard to build a power base in western Missouri, where politicians have always bristled at the fact that St. Louis has had the edge in senatorial power most of the time since World War II.

WHILE WHEELER has been generally regarded as an excellent mayor for Kansas City, most politicians contacted think he will only serve to take votes away from Litton and will have little effect on the fortunes of Hearnes or Symington.

He has generally been favorable to Hearnes during the latter's years as governor of Missouri, observers point out.

But Symington had an effective organization in Jackson County (Kansas City) several months ago, and Hearnes grabbed early endorsements from some of the leaders of the older, but still effective, Jackson County political factions.

On the other hand, Jackson County blacks violently oppose Hearnes for what they thought was unusually strong action to put down Kansas City rioting in the wake of the killing of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in the spring of 1968.

Knowledgeable political observers think Hearnes may very well pick up a slight majority in St. Louis.

"I think Hearnes will get a majority in the city, probably with about 11 wards (out of the total of 28), but I don't know how much," said a major Democratic political, who asked that his name not be used.

"IF LITTON gets three wards, he'll be lucky," he said.

"But there's no doubt the investigation of Hearnes (by U.S. Attorney Bert Hurn in Kansas City) has hurt," said the political spokesman.

The same view was voiced by two major Democratic politicians in the state, who also declined to be named.

"It's a real horse race, maybe even a photo finish" between Litton and Symington, said one. "Warren just hasn't gotten off the ground yet."

"It's Symington, of that I'm sure now," another said. "A month ago, I'd have said Litton, but he's just a little too smooth."

BUT ALL IS not roses for Litton in his native northwestern Missouri 6th Congressional District.

Former State Sen. John E. Downs, a St. Joseph lawyer and longtime Democrat, said Litton "has a good image, a good smooth operation and a lot of money, but he's really too slick and all this business about a western Missouri senator...I don't pick a doctor to work on my ulcers just because he's from my side of town," Downs said.

But Litton is mounting a major effort to become known in the St. Louis area, scheduling a "Meet Me in St. Louis" door-to-door invasion of the area May 22 by 6th District supporters.

DOWNS, A STRONG Democratic partisan, pointedly noted also that Litton's northwestern Missouri billboards make no mention of his Democratic politics.

With the Kansas City and St. Louis areas really clouded at this point, politicians are looking carefully at Little Dixie in central Missouri and the strongly Democratic Bootheel to bolster their strength.

But not much is happening in Little Dixie, a traditionally Democratic area in north central Missouri.

"Callaway County has been as void of political activity as it can be this close to an election, particularly in the Senate race," said Rep. Joe Holt of Fulton, a Callaway County Democrat.

"QUITE FRANKLY, no one around here is much interested in the Senate race right now, until the presidential primaries are out of the way," said a longtime Jefferson City Democratic politician who asked that his name not be used.

ANTI-SOCIAL SECURITY

Shirley Scheibla, writing for Barron's, has picked up the hot potato in Washington circles wherein employes of state and local governments are opting out of Social Security.

For the first time in the history of Social Security, employes of a state government--Alaska--have formally notified Washington that they intend to withdraw from the system. According to the Daily News, New York City, New York City also is weighing the withdrawal of its municipal workers, at an estimated savings of $200 million a year.

The Social Security Act provides that groups of employes of state governments and their subdivisions may withdraw after participating in the system for five years and giving two years' notice. Alaska gave notice last December. In addition, state subdivisions in growing numbers are opting out. Californians led withdrawals last year, with 11,909 workers involved, up from 2,649 a year earlier. In Louisiana, the figure came to 5,435 in 1975, compared with 2,912 in 1974. All told, pending withdrawal notices filed through the 1975 year-end involve 53,187.

Such developments underscore the mounting opposition throughout the country to payment of Social Security taxes. Members of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over Social Security legislation, are being flooded with mail from people, chiefly the self-employed, who want to drop out of the Social Security System.

Distrust of the Social Security System and rising costs are the main reasons why those who can are opting out. Although the Ford Administration has estimated that the trust funds will be exhausted in seven years, it apparently sees no great urgency to provide a funding solution. But Dr. Robert J. Myers, former longtime chief actuary of the Social Security Administration, told Barron's the money is more likely to run out in three or four years. He cautions against undue alarm because he feels certain Congress will take corrective measures.

Historically, Congress has shied away from going above 10 per cent in the combined employer-employe Social Security tax for fear of a taxpayer revolt. But now the combined tax stands at 11.7 per cent, and President Ford has proposed boosting it to 12.3 per cent.

But it is the higher costs of Social Security that is an increasing problem. Paul H. Jackson, a consulting actuary, declares, "If you have 10 years in Social Security, you ought to get out if you have the option, because you'll have much bigger benefits elsewhere. Social Security is weighted on low average pay, and this means an incentive to qualify for a minimum benefit and then drop out."

Social Security experts on the staff of the Ways and Means Committee agree, saying, "The benefit schedule is weighted in favor of people who have worked a short time, and this is a real drain on the system." Those who pull out, however, lose their disability income coverage after five years, in addition to the right to increase their average earnings on which benefits are based.

Back in 1970, the growing opposition to Social Security was foreseen in Supplemental Republican Views filed when the Ways and Means Committee reported out a Social Security bill. They warned: "We simply must remember that the income a worker can devote to future contingencies is limited by his ability to meet the immediate needs of his family. If the cost of Social Security cuts too deeply into daily living requirements, people will begin to make unfavorable comparisons between current costs and distant benefits."

The fact is the federal government, especially Congress in election years, promises too much--and has painted itself into a corner on overspending Social Security funds.

COMPETITION IMPEDED BY GOVERNMENT RULES

Federal economic regulation of the nation's domestic airlines has benefited neither the airlines nor their consumers, according to U.S. Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman, Jr.

"A naturally competitive, dynamic, individualistic industry has been placed into a straitjacket of a highly inflexible regulatory system which has impeded price competition, denied qualified entrants access to the industry or to new markets and permitted many anticompetive agreements," Secretary Coleman said.

"The result has been misallocated resources, numerous inefficiences and inequities, and most important, higher fares than would otherwise exist. All of this is paid for by travelers and shippers."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Now Hate Humphrey:

Feeling 'futile' over Carter, labor gears for wide Congressional power campaign

WASHINGTON— That old golf pro, labor's chief of chiefs George Meany, knows you can't really win the game in politics or on the links without a niblick – the heavy No. 9 iron for a final, strategic lofty shot. Yet he never put the club in his campaign bag during the opening rounds. Why?

Because the AFL-CIO president really didn't have a party partner. So, characteristically Meany, aware he's known by the enemies he keeps, chose Jerry Ford as the opposition and waited. Thus labor's highly geared, heavily financed, overwhelmingly manpowered, computerized Committee on Political Education (COPE) simply idled through the primaries. Why?

Meany and his strategists (mostly himself) know Hubert Humphrey as the jack-in-the-box -- in and out, in and out. Scoop Jackson couldn't get off the ground without a multi-ton catapult. And no one knew Jimmy Carter.

The ex-governor didn't -- and still doesn't – know the labor "movement." But the Georgian did know what Meany long has realized – this year labor had no place to go but with the Democrats. Thus, the massive COPE machine will be unleashed for Carter though, you can believe it, inside the national labor headquarters the feeling today is one of "resignation" and "futility."

It makes no difference that neither Meany nor Carter is the wooing kind. Both are tough. They'll settle their differences later.

Actually it was Jerry Ford who wrote the 1976 script. He cut himself off from all sections of the "movement," step by step, union by union. The President could have kept some of them in his camp-- and today they'd have been his cheering section.

For example, he alienated the Teamsters, the old Dick Nixon allies (even unto today) by humbling the truckdrivers president Frank "Fitz" Fitzsimmons. This the President did by appointing William Coleman Secretary of Transportation without the usual courtesy call to the head of the 2.2 million-member highway union. Not a peep.

Then President Ford gave the signal for all-out investigations of the sprawling Brotherhood, so much so that scores of teamsters locals now come with a federal auditor attached to the local's records, for months on end.

Also Mr. Ford five times had promised his old friends in the leadership of the AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department he would sign a bill calling for heavy shipment of oil in American tankers, But the President vetoed it. Thus he cut himself off from such men as the Department's politically influential leader, the Seafarers' Paul Hall, as well as from the Marine Engineers chief Jesse Calhoon and the National Maritime Union's (NMU) president Shannon Wall. The latter has long been a regular Democrat so the NMU wouldn't have been in Mr. Ford's scheme of things.

But brothers Hall and Calhoon were old Ford friends. Hall was the first to endorse Jerry Ford for President shortly after the latter's appointment as Nixon's Vice President. Calhoon has been a Republican White House stalwart for years. But now Ford has said bye-bye to their chips.

Finally, President Ford cut loose from the powerful, traditionally Republican Building and Construction Trades Unions. This cost him whatever chance he had for Meany's 1972-type neutrality. Meany the ex-Bronx plumber is construction trades oriented. By vetoing the common situs bill which would have extended construction unions' picketing powers, Mr. Ford vetoed Meany.

So the AFL-CIO elder statesman, still as tough as any-iron, is in a position rare even in his marathon career to unify all labor around a presidential candidate. He and Carter all along knew that the AFL-CIO would have to take any Democrat nominated except Wallace.

For "losing" to Carter, one of Meany's intimates blames Sen. Humphrey in earthy language I've not often heard, even inside labor.

"There is real bad feeling over Humphrey," this source said. "He made Jimmy Carter with his fooling around; his inability to make up his mind; his 'punking' Jackson; his showing up on the scene like a vulture to get the applause. He really split our opposition ot Carter."

Then came a colorful comparison between "Hubert" and Liz Ray.

So what now? Plenty. Meany is about to make the rounds with fistfuls of niblicks. And COPE has some mighty clubs to wield now that it is about to be unleashed for the first time this year, onto the national political scene.

It's too early to predict who will take the White House. But labor's chiefs will wager that they take the Congress. Quietly, Al Barkan's COPE has been in the deep nitty-gritty of precinct politics. It has been registering its people in depth -- all the way from the Navajo Indian nation (with which the construction unions are now linked) to the Eastern megalopolises, through COPE's Labor Council for Latin American Advancement.

There are few black areas, except in some Southern precincts, where labor's A. Philip Randolph Institute isn't operating. Combined with the huge black vote for Carter, millions of blacks could be the Democratic balance of power in scores of marginal congressional districts.

Money is being raised through direct contributions, special funds (from which corporate Political Action Committees could take lessons) and even by such huckstering as the United Steelworkers political action card sales ($5 a throw) for which prizes, ranging from Virgin Island vacations to 12-gauge shotguns, are being awarded.

There may be a new boy in town. But to labor's well-oiled machine it's politics as usual. Capture the Congress. The President of the U.S., if he's a Democrat, will come a-wooing. Even if he's Jerry Ford. Ronnie Reagan may be the exception. But that gets ahead of the story–which is just beginning.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— While the public spotlight is focused on sex in Washington the State Department is quietly promoting sex abroad.

In faraway Indonesia, for example, U.S. Ambassador David Newsom has been notified that he will soon receive a shipment of over 50 million prophylactics as a foreign aid offering from the American taxpayers.

He solemnly pledged in a "priority" cable that he would strive to "greatly expand present usage rates." But he pleaded that the available supply is more than adequate and begged headquarters to 'ship Indonesia no repeat no condoms" in the coming year.

The contraceptives have been consigned to Jakarta under a perfectly legitimate program to control birth rates in underdeveloped countries. But, as is their wont, the foreign aid bureaucrats have wound up accomplishing a service far removed from their mission.

Each year, the State Department's foreign aid agency ships millions of prophylactics, birth control pills, inter-uterine devices and cans of contraceptive foam to underdeveloped nations. This year alone, the agency plans to distribute some $11 million worth of condoms and $14 million worth of pills around the world.

The bureaucrats run into a problem, however, when they go shopping for the best buy. To get a good price, they purchase huge quantities. This creates a surplus, which the bureaucrats must dispose of. So suddenly, American ambassadors around the globe find themselves inundated with pills and prophylcactics.

This is what has happened in Indonesia. The harassed ambassador was "surprised to learn," he cabled, "... that AID plans supply Indonesia 51,442,757 condoms during 1977."

He took a quick inventory of the birth control devices already on hand and concluded that the Indonesians already have far more than they can be expected to utilize, given the state of romance in the country. As for the 51,442,757 additional condoms about to be shipped, he cabled Washington despairingly that he "never and does not intend request these condoms."

Newsom cited some alarming statistics in his cable. "At March 1976 rate of condom usage (8077 gross) Indonesia has three years condom stock presently in country. Further 200,000 gross from (United Nations agencies) will soon be arriving, which will extend in-country stock to calculated level of over four years supply."

Not that the Ambassador is unwilling to do his part to advance sex in Indonesia. He would "try to greatly expand present usage rates," he promised. But he still felt he must "urge AID ship Indonesia no repeat no condoms during 1976-1977."

But in Washington, officials were not impressed with his problem. A spokesman told us that the ambassador had based his projectioins on "last year's figures." Explained the spokesman solemnly: "We're hoping that usage is going to increase, and we're trying to get them to do that."

Footnote: This isn't the first time the bureaucrats at AID have become over enthusiastic about population control. Some time ago, we reported that foreign aid funds were used to circulate throughout Catholic Latin America a birth control comic book written in Spanish.

The cover featured a picture of the Virgin Mary and the caption: "Little Virgin, you who conceived without sinning, help me to sin without conceiving."

WATCH ON WASTE: Coal companies will save millions of dollars at the taxpayers' expense if the Army Engineers have their way.

Millions are going into the mammoth Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, which may turn out to be the biggest boondoggle of the decade before it is completed.

The Tenn-Tom project, as it is known less formally, will be a connecting canal along the Alabama-Mississippi border. Already, a staggering $1.8 billion construction bill has been run up.

The purpose of the waterway ostensibly is to cut freight transportation costs. Coal will be the main commodity that will be hauled on the canal. Army engineers estimate that the coal traffic will reach 40 million tons a year when the waterway operates at full capacity.

This means the private coal companies, which will pay nothing for the use of the waterway, will get their transporation costs subsidized by the taxpayers to the tune of millions.

About half the coal that travels on the canal won't even be used in this country but will be shipped overseas. The Army Engineers contend that the coal exports will help the national grade balance and will create additional employment.

CIA FOOTNOTE: A group of conservative leaders, led by Rep. Philip Crane, R.-Ill., were entertained and briefed on the wonders of the Thieu regime during a visit to Saigon in 1974. Now it turns out that their sponsors were secretly funded by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The trip was partially financed by the Vietnamese Council on Foreign Relations .. The American guests came back parroting the council's line about the glories of South Vetnam. They also denied the existence of the vicious "tiger cages" where Thieu's prisoners were kept.

No mention was made that the council got $170,000 in 1974-75 from the CIA. Not even all the directors and patrons of the council knew about the secret CIA support.

Apricot Dumplings Are Superb

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Sitting around the swimming pool at the 7 South Street inn in Rockport, Mass., where we were both vacationing, Ann Gelles and I struck up a conversation. When I discovered that Mrs. Gelles' husband came from Vienna and that she had learned to cook some of his favorite Viennese dishes, I asked for her help.

I confided that the recipes I had tried for the famous Viennese dumplings had been disappointing — the dough tough and soggy. Ann Gelles volunteered a foolproof recipe for Fresh Apricot Dumplings (Marillenknoedel) — one her Viennese mother-in-law had bestowed on her. When the recipe was tried in my own and another test kitchen, it resulted in superb dumplings that delighted about a dozen tasters.

SUMMER DELIGHT—Fresh apricot dumplings made from a foolproof Viennese recipe.

ANN GELLES' APRICOT DUMPLINGS

8-ounce package farmer cheese
½ cup butter or margarine
1 egg
1 cup flour, fork-stir to aerate before measuring
12 medium-size fresh apricots, unpeeled and pitted but left whole
12 small sugar cubes
1 tablespoon salt
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Superfine granulated sugar

In the small bowl of an electric mixer, beat cheese well; beat in ¼ cup butter, then egg. On low speed, blend in flour. Form into a ball. On a floured pastry cloth with a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out dough into a 16 by 12-inch rectangle; cut into twelve 4-inch squares. Insert a sugar cube in each apricot. Place an apricot in center of each square; fold up and pinch edges together; with palms of hands roll each into a ball.

Fill a 5 or 6-quart saucepot about ¾ full of water; add the salt. Heat to boiling; add dumplings — they will sink to the bottom. Boil until cooked through and they all come to the top — about 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove dumplings and keep warm.

In a large skillet, melt remaining ¼ cup butter. Add bread crumbs and fry, stirring often, until lightly browned. Add warm dumplings to skillet, turning gently to coat with the crumb mixture. Remove and sprinkle generously with superfine sugar. Serve at once.

Makes 12 dumplings — 6 servings.

Joy of Stitching

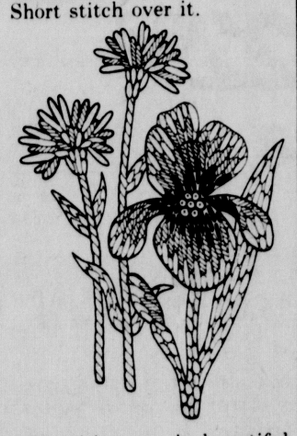
by ELSA WILLIAMS

BOUQUET OF STITCHES

My embroidery reflects my love of flowers which I enjoy growing and painting as well as stitching and I'm always pleased when students want to know more about how to create specific flowers on linen.

Perhaps some of my own flower "recipes" will be helpful. Remember, these are suggestions — not hard and fast rules. As a matter of fact I often vary the stitches I use on a single flower.

The rose with its exquisite shading is a natural candidate for the Long and Short stitch which can duplicate the color subtleties. If you'd like to get some of the petals to "lift" from the linen, work a single line of Spot stitch along the edge of the petal before doing your Long and Short stitch over it.



The iris, too, is beautiful shaded in Long and Short stitch. For accent, at the center of the most prominent petals where there is a definite color gradation, a small patch of dense French Knots adds texture. The tightly furled bud of the iris is effective in diagonal Long and Short stitch which give a spiral effect.

The chrysanthemum's spray of petals is worked in waves of Lazy Daisy stitches, pale at the outside, deepening toward the center. All are worked from the center toward the outer edge. Interesting color depth can be achieved with a single stitch of a deeper shade inside each Lazy Daisy stitch.

The spiky effect of asters or cornflowers come with many, many stitches, from light to dark. Try stitching the deeper tones first, working gradually toward the lighter and distributing them carefully so there is no solid patch of a single tone of color.

An illustrated leaflet on needlepoint applique is available FREE. For yours, write to Elsa Williams, Box 3788, Grand Central Station, N.Y. 10017.

Goldenrod and yellow yarrow are both lovely in French Knots, the former spaced along individual spikes, the latter closely massed in rounded shapes.

Tulips and pansies can be shaded in Long and Short with some petal edges lifted by hidden Split stitches. Use Bullion stitches — in yellow for the pansy center, in deep brown for tulip stems.

Whenever you see flowers in a garden or a seed catalogue, take a minute to study them in terms of stitches. In another column soon I'll discuss stem and leaf stitches.

Dear Elsa,

I see very few designs planned for monochromatic stitching. Is there any time when such a color scheme is an advantage or any type of design which looks best in one color?

F.R.M.

Dear F.R.M.,

I wouldn't say there are designs especially planned for embroidery in one color but a monochromatic scheme can be very effective. It's particularly good for a beginner who wants to concentrate on perfecting technique. Five shades of a single color in crewel yarn can create a handsome design and often will solve color problems in a room where bright or contrasting colors might be a jarring note.

Price rise seen for canned goods

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers can expect to see some price increases for canned fruits and vegetables this summer despite abundant supplies remaining from last year's harvest.

Retail prices for canned goods in the first part of this year generally were lower than in the same period of 1975, but increases at the wholesale level signal an end to the bargains.

"Discounts have been on for most of the year," Lawrence VanMeir, economist for the National Canners Association, said Tuesday, adding that canning company warehouses were overstocked because of large crops and sales slowdowns. "Price cutting came about by companies trying to move the product."

VanMeir said canners were selling some products at a loss. "You've got all this stuff in the warehouse and you've got to move it," he said.

In February, for example, VanMeir said it cost 28.3 cents to produce a can of peas, including almost 11 cents for the peas themselves, 2 cents for labor, 7½ cents for the packaging, almost 3 cents for items such as taxes and about 5 cents for marketing, overhead, etc. At the same time, VanMeir said, canners were being paid 27.9 cents for a can of peas, a loss of four-tenths of a cent.

(The average retail price at the time was 38.3 cents, including four-tenths of a cent profit for the wholesaler and half a cent profit for the retailer.)

The government's Consumer Price Index showed that retail prices for some canned goods decreased from 1975 to 1976. The index for canned pears, for example, stood at just under 161 in January, 1976, a little more than 2½ per cent below what it was a year earlier. The index for canned peas declined about the same amount.

Ann Landers

'Sorry' mom advises against kids

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for being the first columnist in America to take a poll on "Parenthood -- if you had a choice, would you do it again?"

Why were you surprised by the results? I wasn't. Parenthood is the most overrated job in the world. It's all pain and very little joy.

Our society's heavy pressure on young couples to reproduce is a hangover from the days when many hands were needed to work the farm, and thousands of babies died of diseases scarcely heard of today.

In the early years, it gave parents an ego boost to think they were molding a new young life. The experiences of so many of us prove that by the time that young life becomes a teenager, he rejects all parental attempts at "molding" and has no use for his "square" and "bossy" parents.

My husband and I have no one but ourselves to blame. No failed diaphragm, no missed Pill. We actually adopted OUR mistake after a long and happy marriage. The marriage is still hanging together (miraculously, I might add), but the "mistake" is causing us no end of misery. When one problem is solved, two others appear to take its place.

Our advice to people thinking about parenthood is this: If your marriage is good -- leave it alone. Don't take any chances on lousing it up. -- Among The Seventy Per Cent Who Are Sorry

Dear Seventy: I've received many letters from parents who say they are glad they had children and state frankly, "Those other people must be nuts." But according to my mail, the parents who are sorry STILL outnumber the ones who are glad, and by a wide margin.

I believe the logical explanation for this phenomenon is (a) the hurt, angry and disenchanted tend to write more readily than the contented, and (b) people tell me things they wouldn't dare tell anyone else.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible to be allergic to a person? A close friend (I'll call her Gloria) borrowed my satin evening bag in December and returned it in March -- with a cigaret hole and an apology.

She made no move to replace the bag which is what I would have done under similar circumstances. I have never felt the same about her since.

Now, whenever I am in Gloria's presence I begin to sneeze and my nose runs. Last night we went to her home for dinner and the sneezing was worse than ever. Immediately after the dessert, I noticed I had broken out in a rash.

My husband suggested that perhaps my repressed anger is creating an allergic reaction. Is this possible? -- Baffled In Groton

Dear Baff: Yes, it's possible. Anger can and does produce chemical changes in the body. It is also possible that you are allergic to Gloria's perfume or hair spray -- or her desserts. In any event, why don't you tell her you are still irritated because she ruined your evening bag? Suggest she make it right, which, in my opinion, is what you sould have told her back in March.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap.

What's Cooking Over The Coals?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When outdoor cooking goes on at your house this summer, you may want to serve a dozen people or so a thick rump or chuck steak grilled over hot coals.

One way to have this cut taste good when it is cooked without moist heat, is to treat it with unseasoned meat tenderizer. This product is based on papaya, that delicious fruit, and it's the papain enzyme that tenderizes the meat.

Grilled rump or chuck steak tastes best sliced thin; to have it go a long way, offer it in steak sandwiches. For the sandwiches, we like to use French bread and have a pot of fresh herb butter on hand so eaters can slather the slices of bread with it before reaching for the meat. Any taster who eschews the bread can simply spread the herb butter on the meat. Your choice of fresh herbs will of course depend on what's in your garden or market.

STEAK SANDWICHES WITH HERB BUTTER

4-pound rump or chuck steak, 3 inches thick
2 teaspoons unseasoned meat tenderizer
French bread, sliced (2 or 3 loaves will be needed depending on their length)
Herb butter, see below

With your fingers thoroughly moisten all surfaces of the meat with water and sprinkle with the tenderizer. (If the beef is more or less than the amount called for, use about ½ teaspoon of the tenderizer per pound of meat.) With the sharp tines of a fork, deeply pierce the meat at 1-inch intervals.

Grill the beef 2 to 3 inches from hot gray coals — about 13 minutes on each side for rare meat or 15 minutes on each side for medium-rare. To test for doneness, cut a small slit near the center of the meat.

Remove meat to a cutting board or a hot platter and let stand for 5 minutes before cutting in thin diagonal slices across the grain. Serve with slices of French bread and Herb Butter so eaters can make their own sandwiches.

Herb Butter: Let a stick (¼ pound) of butter (salted or unsalted) stand at room temperature to soften slightly; beat well. Drop by drop, beat in 2 teaspoons of lemon juice. Stir in 2 tablespoons minced fresh herbs — chives, Italian parsley, dill or tarragon or a combination of these herbs. Cover tightly and chill.

How to wash worn wicker

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I recently acquired an antique wicker chest that is slightly worn and very dirty. Please tell me how to clean it and take care of the worn wicker. —JERI.

DEAR JERI — I presume your chest has a natural colored finish, since paint was not mentioned. For washing, add one tablespoon household ammonia to one quart of warm water, and scrub with a brush. Rinse with clear lukewarm water. When dry a coat of liquid wax could be applied if desired. I am not really sure what you mean by "worn wicker" but if that refers to the ends that come loose and stick out to be sure they are refastened and the ends smoothed with sandpaper so they will not make snags in clothing. My experience has been that it is not easy to find people who specialize in repairing old wicker. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those drivers who refuse to stop for a school bus. All states have laws requiring drivers in all lanes and going in both directions to stop for a school bus when its lights are flashing. There is a school bus stop in front of my house where three buses stop twice a day and every day I see drivers who keep on going in spite of flashing lights, honks from the bus drivers and children trying to cross the street in plain view. The police do try but they cannot be at every bus stop, for every bus every day. —EILEEN

Town votes to disolve charter

GILBERTSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There's been no Gilbertsville Tea Party, but residents of this city of 300 have revolted against taxes and won by abolishing the city that taxed them.

The end came when Circuit Court Judge James Lassiter signed a written order dissolving the town's charter at noon Tuesday.

The mayor and five trustees ordered the streetlights turned off and began gathering together their city papers.

Hubert Deboe, leader of the citizens' group that began the revolt with a suit three years ago, contended the services provided by Gilbertsville were not worth paying taxes for. The group had asked Lassiter to dissolve the charter on those grounds.

Unable to decide the question, Lassiter finally had it put on the ballot. The vote last month was 111 to 63 to abolish the charter.

"I'll just be glad when it's over and we won't be harassed by a little board that can't furnish us any facilities of any description and never would be able to," Deboe said.

But one city trustee, Jim Boyd, predicted that the residents who began their battle against the city with a lawsuit three years ago would find their victory a hollow one.

He said he expected a move would begin in less than a year to reincorporate the community at the northern tip of Kentucky Lake about 20 miles from Paducah — "when they see what they've lost."

As for the immediate effects, Boyd said, city marshal Lloyd Olsen, a retired physician who donated his time as the city's one policeman, "has ceased patroling."

"Gilbertsville lies along the main highway and has a 35 mile per hour speed zone and has always suffered with speeders," Boyd said. "There has been vandalism, and now that we don't have a town marshal I would assume vandalism will be on the uprise.

"There is a need for (street) lights, and that is one of the things we are worried about," he said.

Marshall County Sheriff Jerry English said patrols will not be increased just because the town has dissolved. He said the sheriff's office has always patrolled the area with one car and will continue to do so.

Lassiter said "police protection will be provided by the sheriff's office. We won't have a crime wave. It's a peaceful sort of community."

Boyd said he was glad to cease being a trustee. As for his records, he said, there is no Gilbertsville city hall, which leaves only one suitable city-owned place to put them.

Missouri Utilities cuts rates

CAPE GIRARDEAU — An electrical rate reduction is in store for customers of Missouri Utilities Co. following a decision by the Federal Power Commission.

The decision, however, has no impact on efforts by the city of Cape Girardeau to determine whether it should go into the electrical distribution business.

While that study is now on the back burner, pending completion of the budget and several other pressing matters, city hall said the study will be pursued in the near future.

Both the city and Missouri Utilities sought to reduce a rate increase asked by Union Electric Co. before the FPC. Union is the parent company and wholesale supplier to the local distributor.

A decision Monday by the federal agency involved a tariff hike filed last year for wholesale power.

According to a news release from Missouri Utilities, the company had intervened in the case along with other wholesale buyers. Union Electric's original proposal was reduced by nearly $1.3 million.

Further hearings were held in December and the proposed increase was further reduced. Missouri Utilities officers and council participated. The portion affecting Missouri Utilities was cut by $1,090,000 from $3,260,000.

Since the FPC had granted the increase on an interim basis this means that customers are also entitled to a refund.

Missouri Utilities said that upon receipt of additional data it would file with the Missouri Public Service Commission an application to pass the refunds to customers.

Electrical rates, too, will be cut somewhat, but the amount is uncertain.

Whites in Zambia disillusioned

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — As whites stand and fight for their privileged way of life in Rhodesia, many of their counterparts living in neighboring black ruled Zambia are becoming disillusioned about their long-term future in the country.

Last year President Kenneth Kaunda invited a group of Rhodesian lawmakers to Zambia in an effort to persuade them that black majority rule in their own country would not be as disastrous as they feared.

"We took them round and they looked at the farms being worked by white Zambians. They looked at life in the broadest sense in the towns. They saw black, white and brown Zambians all working together. We thought it might help them," he told reporters recently.

"The whole idea was to show them that it is possible for all people to be equal members of society. Provided they behave sensibly."

But although Zambia's 44,000 whites are better off economically than the vast majority of black Zambians, there is an undercurrent of discontent over developments in the country which until independence from Britain in 1964 was the white ruled colony of Northern Rhodesia.

Many whites say they are finding it extremely difficult to adjust to the one-party Socialist society being engineered by Kaunda.

Others, especially among the younger elements, are more adaptable and still strong in their determination to remain in Zambia. But an increasing number are opting to build a new life elsewhere, often in South Africa where whites still enjoy a priveleged, prosperous, free and easy way of life.

Prior to independence there were 74,000 whites in Zambia but since then the figure has remained almost static at around 44,000. Only 3,500 whites have taken Zambian citizenship. The rest either have resident status but retain foreign passports or are contract workers. When resident whites leave their jobs the positions are often filled by short-term contract workers.

There are no whites in the Kaunda government although those with citizenship have exactly the same political rights as the blacks. However whites hold senior positions in the civil service and judiciary as well as executive positions in state controlled firms. Others farm or still run small businesses.

Without exception those interviewed by this correspondent asked for their names not to be used.

Jack is a prosperous middle-aged farmer who has lived in Zambia for 22 years, and grows wheat and maize on his 1,000-acre farm on the outskirts of this capital city.

"This is God's own country for farmers," he says. "It is so fertile all you have to do is bend down and pluck food out of the ground. But as I see it there is no future for the white expatriate farming community in Zambia.

"I would sell up and leave tomorrow for South Africa if it was not for the fact that I can't get my assets out of the country because of government restrictions," he said.

Whites generally agree with Kaunda that blacks, browns and whites are coexisting peacefully in Zambia except for the occasional flare-up, most frequently stemming from derogatory remarks made by whites about blacks.

Like many others Jack complains about the fact that the quality of life for whites has declined in Zambia since the end of British rule.

The landlocked central, southern African nation is at present being squeezed by its worst economic crisis since independence. It is being caused by rock bottom world prices for copper, its major export and Kaunda's decision to close the border with Rhodesia which provided the main channel for imports and exports.

As a result Zambians suffer perpetual shortages of butter, cheese soap, rice and other items which fetch astronomical prices. A bar of soap costs $1.75 as does a pound of butter. Long lines spring up when word spreads they are available.

Whites such as Jack, with resident status, complain that because of foreign exchange shortages, they are unable to get allowances to travel on vacations abroad. However, this does not apply to contract workers who get paid foreign leave and can remit part of their salaries home.

In addition white settlers claim to be concerned over planned reforms which will alter the educational system and prevent them — and blacks — sending their sons and daughters to schools abroad.

Petrek named to SEMO post as vice president and professor

CAPE GIRARDEAU—The 48-year-old executive vice-president of Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., will become vice president for academic services and professor of philosophy at Southeast Missouri State University here, president Robert Leestamper announced Tuesday.

Dr. William J. Petrek (pronounced Pea Trek), who is also provost and dean of the faculties at Hofstra, a private university of about 11,000 students, will begin his new duties about August 1.

He will visit the Southeast Missouri State campus at least twice between now and Aug. 1, according to Dr. Leestamper.

Dr. Petrek was one of three finalists recommended by a committee established to conduct an open search for an academic vice president, Dr. Leestamper said. The three were interviewed on campus by the committee and Dr. Leestamper, and their credentials were reviewed by the Board of Regents on May 27.

The search committee began work in late March after the regents approved plans for the academic and administrative reorganization of the university. The committee consisted of six elected faculty members and two administrative representatives appointed by the president.

An advertisement placed by the committee announcing the new administrative post stated, "Criteria for the position shall include an earned doctorate, a distinguished teaching career, appropriate administrative experience, evidence of scholarly research and a commitment to the principles of collegiality in university governance."

One hundred and eighty-eight applications were received.

"I'm well pleased with the work of the search committee," Dr. Leestamper said. "They moved swiftly on a difficult task. I am looking forward to working with Dr. Petrek. He has ouutstanding academic credentials, excellent administrative experience and a sound philosophy of education. We are fortunate that we were able to attract a person of his quality. I feel confident that he will make a significant contribution to Southeast Missouri State University and this region."

Dr. Petrek will be responsible for the overall administration of the academic programs at Southeast Missouri State, including library services, curriculum and faculty development.

He will also chair the Academic Council. Council membership will include the deans of the six colleges which will come into being at Southeast Missouri State on July 1, the director of the library, registrar, dean of continuing education, dean of graduate studies and elected representatives from each of the colleges and the library.

White House dinner to be covered live on PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — For reasons that elude me, the Public Broadcasting Service says it'll spend the entire night of July 7 showing public TV viewers live and taped coverage of a quiet dinner at the White House.

The dinner is to honor Britain's royal family, which is making what PBS calls a "historic bicentennial visit" here, no doubt to explain that George III acted a bit rashly 200 years ago.

PBS says its coverage, to begin at 8 p.m. EDT and end at 11 p.m. unless dessert is late, will be anchored by newsman Robert MacNeil, Jean Marsh, public TV's most famous maid, and Julia Child, a cook.

It says the live show will include the royal family's departure from Blair House, the official receiving line at the White House, the procession to dinner, the toasts and the live entertainment.

Now we've never seen such a live TV dinner honoring a royal family, but we suspect the commentary will go something like this:

MacNeil: "The royal family is arriving and — what's this? Chevy Chase is right behind them. Whoops, he fell down. But he's getting up, he's saying 'no problem, no problem,' and the Duk is looking bemused."

Childs: "Oh, look, the souffle just fell down, too."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Not now, Jean. The royal family is being seated, Mr. and Mrs. Ford are being seated and — what's this? Ronald Reagan is being standed. Someone forgot his chair."

Child: "Tonight's main course is — meat and potatoes?"

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Please, not now, Jean. As we can see, the President is rising to make a toast ... Mrs. Ford is handing him the toaster ... the Duke is asking for the peanut butter ... it seems dinner is under way."

Child: "The interesting thing, Robert, is that the peanut butter is of the crunchy variety."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "I said, not now, Jean. Queen Elizabeth, as we can see, is chatting with Mr. Ford. Mr. Ford is laughing. She must have said something funny. No, maybe not. In fact, the Queen is frowning now."

Child: "Robert, if I may interject, I believe she said, 'Would you please pass me the colonies?' and may have been misunderstood."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Jean, I repeat, this is no time for a fund drive."

Marsh: "Yes, but how shall we pay for this live coverage?"

Drought has spread through most of Upper Midwest

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — With the ground parched and the sky cloudless, the worst cows go up for sale first. Then the better stock. The corn is only as high as your ankle, half what it should be.

Drought has spread through most of the Upper Midwest — Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas.

The farmers cite an immediate crisis in hay and forage. Experts say severely curtailed grain crops seem inevitable.

Farmers and state agriculture officials throughout the region say the drought has lasted three months now. There has been little rain to speak of since winter snows melted.

On Monday, thunderstorms were reported across central and southern sections of the state, with up to two inches in some areas. However, a spokesman for the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said prior to the storms that at least four inches was needed to have any effect on drought-stricken crops.

Officials here say the crop loss in Minnesota alone has already reached $1 billion, one-third of the crop production predicted for the year.

So far, the biggest damage has been done to hay. Later crops such as corn and soybeans — two mainstays of Minnesota agriculture — are also threatened.

The farmers are starting to look to Washington for disaster aid.

"I can't remember when it looked any worse," says South Dakota state plant scientist Lyle Derscheid. He's old enough to recall the '30s.

Already, farmers who have barren pastures and no hay or feed grain are selling off cattle.

The Wadena County Emergency Board says implement dealers there expect to dismiss employes "because of discontinuing of purchases by farmers."

And Ralph C. Schmidt, a bank president in Appleton, in west-central Minnesota, says small grain there is bordering on "total loss."

Some weather and crop observers in Minnesota say it is the worst drought in 100 years. Wefald says crop damage estimates of $1 billion are "conservative."

The crisis extends through all of the five-state region called the Upper Midwest, with the exception of Iowa, which has fared better.

Scientists claim success with embryo transplant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say they have produced a healthy baby baboon by transferring an early embryo from its original mother to another female who carried it until birth.

The development is a first for primates and raises the distant possibility that surrogate mothers also may be feasible for humans, a Texas A&M University researcher said Tuesday.

The idea of using substitute mothers for women unable to carry a baby full term has been discussed in recent years. Aside from the technical difficulties, however, the idea raises social, legal and ethical questions.

"The real impact of our work is in developing animal models for studying the process of pregnancy, rather than for an infertility treatment," Dr. Duane C. Kraemer said in an interview.

In the current issue of the journal Science, Kraemer and his colleagues, Drs. Gary T. Moore and Martin A. Kramen, describe how they removed a baboon embryo five days after ovulation from one female and put it into another.

Moore is with the Southwest Foundation for Research and Education in San Antonio, Tex., where the work was done, and Kramen is with the University of Texas at San Antonio.

The second female carried the developing male baby for about 170 days until it was delivered by caesarean section on Sept. 5, 1975, the report said. Normal average gestation for this type of baboon is 175 days.

Kraemer said the baby baboon, now nine months old, was "normal in every respect at birth and is the same way now.

"We have him running around with a group of his peers at the Southwest Foundation and the only way you can tell him from the others is by his tattooing."

Even with the success, the researchers said their work was preliminary since they only had one success out of 10 embryo transfers.

Oil drilling to begin in Wyoming

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Rainbow Resources based here and five other firms have embarked on a $10 million oil exploration program in Wyoming and Colorado that calls for drilling up to 20 wildcat wells, an official said Tuesday.

Rainbow Resources president Don Carpenter said drilling is scheduled to begin next month in the Denver-Julesburg Basin of southeast Wyoming and northeast Colorado. He said projects in northwest Colorado and in other parts of Wyoming would get under way later this summer.

He said 17 to 20 planned wildcat wells are expected to encompass nearly 180,000 acres. Rainbow Resources and the other five firms hold options to drill more wildcats in Wyoming's Big Horn Basin and southeast Wyoming if the scheduled wildcats show a good yield, Carpenter said.

He said four wells are planned in northeast Colorado and southeast Wyoming near where Amoco Production Co., has drilled several exploratory wells.

Garrison hearing begins today

KENNETT — Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr., of Corinth, Miss., returned to Kennett this morning for a preliminary hearing in Dunklin County Magistrate Court on a first-degree murder charge stemming from the Sept. 8, 1974, slaying of his ex-wife, Lee Ann Garrison.

Stoddard County Magistrate Jimmie Trammell was to conduct the hearing. Trammell was designated as the special judge after defense attorneys disqualified Dunklin County Magistrate Leon McAnally on May 19. The disqualification move by Garrison's defense attorney resulted in a delay in the hearing, which had been originally set by Judge McAnally for May 24.

On May 24, Judge Trammell set the new hearing date for the Dunklin County Magistrate Court, the hearing to begin at 9 a.m.

The Corinth physician's return marks his second since he gave up his extradition fight May 7, three days before his return was ordered by a federal judge in Mississippi, who denied Garrison any further appeal on his lengthy extradition battle.

Garrison's first appearance in the Missouri court system on the murder charge resulted in his being booked at the Dunklin County Jail immediately upon his arrival and then his appearance before Magistrate Judge McAnally, where he posted a $25,000 bond with a cashier's check, and requested a preliminary examination on the felony charge.

After his appearance before Judge McAnally, Garrison and his attorneys were brought before Circuit Judge Flake McHaney, who offered to set aside, upon the defense's request, a contempt citation issued almost two years ago stemming from Garrison's alleged failure to return the couple's children to their mother in Kennett.

Over 45 subpoenas have been issued by the court, including 30 at the request of the defense attorneys and 15 at the request of the prosecution.

In Missouri, a preliminary hearing is not a trial of the accused for the offense alleged in the complaint but merely an inquiry to determine if there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and probable cause to believe that the accused is the offender so that he may be bound over to the circuit court and tried on the charge.

covered; empty and thoroughly wash birdbaths and pans for watering chicks and dogs at least once a week; clean out rain gutters; examine flat roofs after rains, be sure no water remains on them.

Drain or fill in stagnant pools and swampy places, if pools cannot be drained or filled in, remove debris and floating vegetation; examine stock-watering tanks for larvae or pupae once each week or oftener, keeping clean and repairing leaks; fill around watering devices to prevent water from standing.

Examine philodendron and other plants in water in the house—although potted plants will not breed mosquitoes, saucers under the plants may accumulate enough water for breeding; check fish bowls and aquariums—not all kinds of fish destory mosquito larvae; check ponds and oxidation lagoons for larvae and remove weeds, vegetation and floating debris from them.

Control measures in lagoons should be restricted to using a very light film of diesel oil or kerosene, spraying the water area that has grass or weeds growing up to one and a half feet from the water's edge and using only a light film of oil on the water surface.

To kill the larvae, apply insecticide. For water not used as drinking water for humans, animals or poultry or for birdbaths or aquariums, you may apply a spray containing 0.5 per cent lindane, or 2 per cent of malathion, or you may apply kerosene or fuel oil full strength.

To kill mosquito larvae in a fish pond or ornamental pool without poisoning fish or plants, apply a light mist spray of a pyrethrum oil solution – usually obtainable in stores and called "pyrethrins" and "petroleum distillate."

To the suggestions, Manning added, "By all means, follow directions" on label of any insecticide.

In the final statement of the report, Manning said, communities may add further protection for its citizens by operating fogging equipment, but this approach should not be the only one and is of lesser importance than those mentioned above.

used if it is as effective as a fence, Church said.

The commission tabled action on proposals requiring a 25-foot setback on all structures in multiple-family zoning and calling for subdivision developers to install sidewalks on all arterial streets running through the subdivision.

Also tabled were proposals for increasing the square footage requirements in commercial zoning and subdividing a lot at the corner of Prairie Street and East Kathleen Avenue.

The western portion of Long Island on the Halston River at Kingsport, Tenn., looks very much as it did in July, 1776, when the Cherokees attacked a pioneer settlement there. The defeat of the Indians and a subsequent American expedition against Indian villages brought a two-year peace to the southwestern frontier.

Swimmer continues downstream

FESTUS, Mo. (AP) — Wayne A. Thompson, with some 700 miles of the Mississippi River behind him, was to continue his marathon swim to New Orleans today.

The Portland, Ore., insurance underwriter reached this city south of St. Louis for an overnight stay Tuesday after covering 40 miles of river marked by wind-whipped waves.

Some were as high as four feet, he said, noting "It was really bad out there."

Thompson hopes to reach New Orleans by July 8.

Scene from Stephen Foster Story

Stephen Foster visits the Federal Hill plantation in a scene from "The Stephen Foster Story," which opened Saturday in Bardstown, Ky. The outdoor musical will play nightly, except Mondays, through Sept. 5.

Foster story opens for their 18th season

BARDSTOWN, Ky. — One of Kentucky's favorite summertime attractions, "The Stephen Foster Story," opened its 18th season here Saturday to a sold-out house.

The popular outdoor musical with its lavish period costumes and romantic story has played to over 900,000 patrons during its run and seems to have even stronger audience appeal during this Bicentennial year when many American's are looking at their history.

The show, written by Pulitzer Prize- winner Paul Green, is set during 1849 and 1850 and tells of the complications involved in the writing of Foster's most famous piece, "My Old Kentucky Home".

Playing Stephen Foster for a fourth season is Reese Holcombe; Jeanie is played for a fourth time by Daune Mahy. Both performers have extensive operatic and musical theatre experience.

"The Stephen Foster Story" will play nightly, except Mondays, through Sept. 5 at 8:30 p.m. EDT. Reservations and information are available by writing P.O. Box D, Bardstown, Ky., or by calling telephone number 502-348-5971.

Entertainment is planned for all the community. There will be booths of various kinds set up on the ground with a "dunking tank" and other entertainment.

Prizes will be awarded as the "brothers of the brush" shed the growth and those who have participated and already shaven, will be fined or sent to jail, which will also be place on the park grounds.

Committees have been appointed for each program and the business places are asked to support the all-day community program.

Bingham shirts to be sold to aid in buying drawings

Handsome hand- made shirts, patterned after the shirts popular among 19th Century Missouri rivermen and drawn repeatedly by George Caleb Bingham as he traveled across the state more than 100 years ago, are being sold throughout Missouri as part of the drive to buy the 112-work collection of Bingham drawings for the people.

A total of 600 of the shirts are being made by volunteers in dozens of Missouri communities as a joint undertaking of the Missouri Women's Bingham Shirt Project, a group formed for this purpose, and the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, which has designated the efforts as its Bicentennial project.

Each shirt is being sold for $20, with all proceeds going to the campaign to save the Bingham drawings as a collection owned by the people of Missouri. Thus the sale of all 600 shirts would realize $12,000 for the campaign.

Bingham Sketches, Inc. must obtain $1.8 million in contributions and pledges if the collection is not to be broken up and the bulk of the drawings sold individually, probably at public auction in the East. About $1,075,000 has been raised privately so far and $500,000 has been appropriated by the Missouri Legislature, leaving about $225,000 to be raised before the June 30 deadline.

One of Bingham's drawings, titled "Riverman", has been reserved for the people in the name of the Shirt Project if shirt sales meet or exceed the drawing's $10,000 appraised value.

The shirts are being made in small, medium and large sizes of a modern, easy- to- care for fabric with a homespun look. It is loose-fitting, with sleeves gathered and attached below the shoulder and is suitable for either men or women.

Mrs. Burt Rowe of Sikeston, a member of the Binhgam Citizens Committee spearheading the fund drive and Mrs. William Crowder of University City, state art chairman of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, are co-coordinators of the shirt project.

"The extraordinary thing about this project is that everything has been donated," Mrs. Crowder remarked. "The fabric, the thread, the tags, even the shirtboxes." And, of course, the work by the volunteers.

John G. Rowan, president of Elder Manufacturing Co. in St. Louis, donated 500 yards of fabric that normally sells for up to $3 a yard.

Through the efforts of Robert Trebesch at Montgomery Ward's regional office in Kansas City, 1,000 additional yards of cloth were made available by his company at 65 cents a yard and paid for with $650 contributed by two anonymous donors in St. Louis.

The 600 spools of thread required were donated by Rex Lambert of Lambert's Fabrics, Cape Girardeau. Cumbee's Fabrics, Sikeston, gave gold safety pins and The Daily Standard contributed the tags which tell about the shirts and the Bingham drawings. Jean's Studio of Sikeston contributed a negative of the drawing, "Riverman", which is printed on the tags and various Sikeston merchants provided boxes.

Mrs. Arlene Powell of the University of Missouri Extension Service in Jefferson City, a professional pattern drafter, designed the pattern in three sizes and members of the Jefferson City Women's Club spent a total of 600 hours making about 150 patterns.

Members of the St. Louis and Sedalia clubs cut the fabric into two-and-a-half yard lengths and Sikeston women packaged kits to send to the seamstresses, who are making one to five shirts each.

Many of the shirts were spoken for before they were made; others are on sale in selected stores which have agreed to remit the entire $20 price to the Bingham campaign.

"The cooperation of everyone connected with this project has been truly impressive, and without every bit of it, we would have failed," Mrs. Rowe said of the project.

"Hundreds of persons have donated their time, their money and their skills to make it possible. As a result, Missourians have the opportunity to buy a very distinctive shirt at a very low price and at the same time help save Bingham's wonderful drawings for our state and its people."

Information on how to obtain a Bingham shirt may be obtained from Mrs. Burt Rowe, Box 909, Sikeston, Mo. 63801, Mrs. William Crowder, 439 North Jackson Ave., University City, Mo., 63130, local women's clubs in the Missouri Federation and local participants in the project.

Contributions to the Bingham campaign, which are tax-deductible, may be sent to Bingham Sketches, Inc., P.O. Box 720, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Boys Town to have a large deficit

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Boys Town officials say the "City of Little Men" will have an operating budget deficit of about $1 million this year and a $500,000 deficit next year.

Inflation, increasing expenses, and rising fund-raising costs have slowed completion of some Boys Town projects, officials said. And they hope to balance the budget in 1978.

People can't believe Boys Town has a budget deficit and could be heading in to financial difficulties if action isn't taken, said the Rev. Robert P. Hupp, director. "But it is true."

To cut back, officials will not buy some equipment and room furnishings for the speech-hearing institute and child study center now under contruction.

The home also will trim some staff and delay hiring new personnel in some areas, Father Hupp said. No big capital expenditures will be undertaken until the budget is balanced, he said.

However, Father Hupp said, no cutbacks will be made in direct services to boys. Renovations of cottages, for example, will continue.

The home has an annual operating budget of about $18 million. Officials hope to meet the budget with income from the home's endowment fund and with contributions, most of which come from the home's spring and Christmas mail appeals.

The effort has been falling short and the home is dipping into its endowment fund, the officials said.

At the end of 1975, the fund stood at $194.1 million, compared to the 1974 figure of $202.3 million, the home's financial report showed.

If the home continues to spend from its endowment fund, it would be in financial difficulty within a few years, both Father Hupp and Ramsey said.

Also, they said, the home's direct mail appeals aren't as productive as they once were.

Income from mail appeals and bequests decreased from $10.9 million in 1974 to $9.9 million in 1975, the financial report showed.

The average gift to Boys Town has remained between $3 and $4 over the years, Ramsay said, but the amount does't go as far today far as it once did. And the rise in postage and stationery costs have cut into the mail income.

The home's total assets at the end of 1975 were $242.1 million, officials said.

Mills argues reports on alcoholism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, whose bout with alcoholism cost him his committee chairmanship, has criticized a report that indicated some alcoholics could take up normal drinking patterns after being treated.

"I know enough about the illness to recognize the dangers to alcoholics of any encouragement based upon so-called scientific research that would lead them to believe that there is a permanent cure for alcoholism," he said in a statement issued by his office Saturday.

The report, prepared by the Rand Corp., said that after some alcoholics are treated, they can resume drinking alcohol with no more danger of a relapse than if they abstained.

It was written by Dr. David Armor and was based on case histories and studies of people treated for alcoholism around the country.

Mills resigned as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee after his well-publicized appearances with stripper Fanne Foxe in 1974 and underwent months of treatment for alcoholism in a private hospital.

The Arkansas Democrat has been active in Alcoholics Anonymous, and has spoken publicly about alcohol abuse.

He said in an interview that reports such as that issued by Rand can be "disastrous" for alcoholics.

Such reports, he said "are liable to have caused a lot of alcoholics to go back and take a drink."

"Perhaps those that conducted the study are not as informed as they thought themselves to be and confused alcoholics with heavy drinkers without recognizing the difference," said Mills in his statement.

"A heavy drinker's drinking ... can be controlled but the only way alcoholism can be cured is through total abstinence," he said. "This has been proven time and time again by people who are alcoholics and attempt to drink again."

Ray held information for a year

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Ray withheld public disclosure that she was Rep. Wayne Hays' mistress for almost a year on the advice of her publisher o the publicity could be timed to benefit her novel.

Sarah Gallick, publicity director for the Dell publishing firm, said Saturday that two Washington Post reporters had repeatedly asked Miss Ray for the story of her relationship with Hays.

"I asked her not to give the story until we were ready," said Ms. Gallick, who prefers the feminist designation. "She wanted to work it out so it would be good for the book."

Miss Ray, in London over the weekend promoting her book, "The Washington Fringe Benefit," has charged that Hays put her on his congressional payroll to serve as his mistress. Hays has acknowledged a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but denied she was on the payroll for sex.

Ms. Gallick said Dell editor-in-chief William Grose bought an outline and proposal for the book from Miss Ray's agent, John Cushman, about a year ago.

She indicated the relatively slim novel, ghostwritten by Yvonne Dunleavy, went through a number of rewrites. "I kept reading the manuscript and then the lawyers would look at it, and they would take out all the good parts," she said.

When the lawyers finished and it was ready to go to the Dell salesmen, "I let her talk to the Post," which broke the story, said Ms. Gallick. "I thought the publicity would help the sales."

But she said the story was far bigger than Dell had anticipated. "None of us realized how powerful Wayne Hays was in Washington ... The Washington Post people kept educating us in how powerful Hays was," she said.

The book had been scheduled to come out in August, she said, "but the story became so sensational that we moved the book up."

Mailmen fight lawn crossing issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The letter carriers' union is fighting a Postal Service order that mailmen must walk across residents' lawns to deliver the mail faster.

Arbitration on the issue begins here Wednesday before Paul Fasser, a former assistant secretary of Labor.

"We're are saying that management has the right to require letter carriers to cross lawns," a Postal Service spokesman said.

"The whole idea is to save time and money by delivering mail in the most efficient way possible," he said.

James Rademacher, president of the 200,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers, said, "It's ridiculous to make letter carriers trespass on the lawns of the American people as part of an economy program for the Postal Service."

Many letter carriers already walk across lawns but the Postal Service has been moving to require it when it is the quickest route to the mailbox.

The arbitration centers around a clause in the Postal Service's contract with its labor unions providing that, "Letter carriers may cross lawns while making deliveries if customers do not object and there are no particular hasards to the customer."

Rademacher said the word "may" is permisive. "This means it is up to the letter carrier," the union leader said.

But postal management has used the provision as authority for ordering the lawn crossings. "This is a proper interpretation of the agreement," the Postal Service spokesman said.

He stressed that anyone can avoid having his lawn crossed simply by registering an objection with the Postal Service.

Meanwhile, a second arbitration case brought by the union against a different Postal Service efficiency plan is not expected to be decided before this fall, sources said.

This case involves the so-called Kokomo plan, under which computers would be used to redraw delivery routes to insure that every letter carrier would have eight hours of work per day.

Motorists continue to burn gas at record pace

WASHINGTON (AP) — American motorists are burning gasoline at a record pace this year despite two years of government energy conservation efforts.

Govermment experts say it is too early to tell whether 1976 will be a record year for gasoline consumption but preliminary figures from the Federal Highway Administration show more gasoline was used in the first three months of this year than in the same period of 1973, the previous record.

Federal Energy Administration estimates also show the demand for gasoline was up in April and the first three weeks of May. Heavy vacation travel this summer could increase the average daily consumption even more.

The FEA says it does not expect any shortages this year unless there is another oil embargo or a major refinery fire.

The increased consumption comes despite lower speed limits imposed as a gasoline and life-saving move and the trend toward smaller, more fuel-efficient cars.

Most of the increase apparently results from increased highway driving. Government statistics show that motorists generally are staying close to the 55 m.p.h. national speed limit. There still are not enough small cars to effect consumption one way or the other.

Federal Highway Administration gasoline figures, based on tax collections from gasoline sales, show an estimated 6.4 million barrels of oil were burned as gasoline in January, or about 200,000 barrels more than were used in the same month of 1973. Consumption rose to more than 7 million barrels per day in February, or nearly 330,000 barrels more than in February of 1973. March figures show that about 6.7 million barrels of oil were used as gasoline for an increase of nearly 180,000 barrels over the March 1973, figure.

The figures are estimates and are based on incomplete data, the highway administration's Kent Bramlett says. The January figures, for example, are based on tax figures from 49 states but the March figures are based on returns from only 31 states.

Asked if the nation may be heading for a gas consumption record, Bramlett said: "If it continues, it would be a record. But we don't attempt to establish a trend figure until we have data for at least six months. I wouldn't attempt to make a judgment this early."

Federal Energy Administration figures show demand for gasoline for the four-week period ending May 21 was up 7.8 per cent from the same period last year and 4.4 per cent over the 1973 levels. A spokesman for the agency says it estimates 7.2 million barrels of oil were burned as gasoline each day during the four-week period compared to 6.9 million barrels per day in 1973.

The key figure in gasoline consumption is the rate of annual growth. Federal officials have always expected gasoline usage to grow each year, given a growing population and more cars on the road.

Prior to the embargo, gasoline consumption was growing at a steady 5 or 6 per cent a year. It was the government hope that through voluntary conservation, the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and smaller cars, this could be held down to about 3 or 4 per cent. But with consumption for this year already estimated at more than 7 per cent ahead of last year, the country seems to heading back to its old gasoline guzzling ways.

The result of the increase in consumption is increasing dependence on foreign oil and a stronger bargaining position for major foreign oil exporters. Imports now account for 40 per cent of the nation's oil consumption compared with 36 per cent in 1973, FEA says.

No one knows how much motorists are traveling now that warm weather is here, but the Federal Highway Administration says automobile travel totalled 313.4 billion vehicle miles in the first quarter of 1976 compared with 298.2 billion vehicle miles in the same period of 1975. A vehicle mile is a measurement obtained by multiplying the number of vehicles times the number of miles traveled.

If the 5.1 per cent increase recorded in the first quarter holds true for the remainder of the year, motorists will total just under 1,400 billion vehicle miles for the year. In comparison, the nation recorded 1,308.3 billion vehicle miles in 1973.

No one is quite sure why travel is up so much but government officials note that more and more cars are being added to the road each year and that more women are driving now than in the past. The added umber of women drivers may mean that family cars are being used more during the day.

The Federal Highway Administration estimates there were 107 milion passenger cars registered in 1975 compared to 101 million registered in 1973. About 54.7 per cent of all licensed drivers in 1974 were males compared to 55.2 per cent the previous year and 72 per cent in 1952.

Officials also note the improving economy means some families who stayed at home in the past few years may now be taking to the road for short vacation outings.

Travel speeds have been creeping upward lately but the change is not large enough to have had a major effect on the increased consumption of gasoline.

Frank Jarima, who compiles state speed reports for the highway administration, says the average highway speed of cars measured in free-flowing traffic in 1975 was 55.8 miles per hour. He said 55 per cent of all drivers measured in 1975 were exceeding the 55 mile per hour speed limit and 21 per cent were traveling faster than 60 miles per hour. Six per cent of the cars measured in 1975 were going over 65 miles per hour.

In contrast, the average speed in 1973 was 60.3 miles per hour. Seventy per cent of the drivers were going over 55 miles per hour, 50 per cent over 60 miles per hour and 31 per cent over 65 miles per hour, the highway administration says.

Preliminary speed information for the first quarter indicates that most drivers are in the 55 miles per hour to 60 miles per hour range, Jarima said.

Whatever effect the lower speeds may have had on gasoline consumption, they apparently have had a major effect on the nation's highway death toll.

Last year was the safest year in history for U.S. motorists, according to the National Safety Council. The highway death rate dropped to 3.5 deaths per every 100 million miles traveled, the lowest in the 52 years the organization has kept records. A total of 45,600 persons were killed in traffic accidents, the fewest deaths since 1963.

A spokesman for the organiation said the biggest reason for the drop in fatalities was the lower speeds.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says about 12,700 persons were killed in traffic accidents during the first four months of this year.

'Tomorrow' show stem from Synder's career in California

NEW YORK (AP) — In December 1974, NBC brought anchorman-interviewer Tom Snyder to the East Coast to anchor the low-rated 6 p.m. local news show of NBC-owned WNBC here and do his 1 a.m. "Tomorrow" shows here.

Snyder had been anchoring an evening news show on NBC-owned KNBC in Burbank, Calif., since 1970, and began "Tomorrow" there in October 1973. He came here with a new contract reportedly paying him $475,000 annually.

So has the move paid off for NBC both on a national basis and in Fun City, the nation's largest and richest television market?

"There isn't any question about it — he's doubled the ratings," says Joe Bartleme, head of news operations at NBC's five owned and operated stations. He referred to Snyder's work at WNBC here.

For Robert T. Howard, head of the NBC Television network, the "Tomorrow" answer is yes, not so much in terms of ratings — the show has no network competition in its hour — as in terms of national advertising revenue for NBC and local revenue for local stations.

When the one-hour, Tuesday-through-Friday "Tomorrow" interview show began, it carried few commercials, which pay for the show, and a lot of public service announcements, which bring in no revenue.

"We expected it to go the first year in the red, but now it's profitable," said Howard, declining to say how profitable. "You've also got to realize that at the start local stations had a hard time selling it."

By that, he meant time sold to local sponsors, a problem NBC also had nationally.

He said now about 90 per cent of the available commercial time on the show has been sold, "business is good" for the 167 stations now airing the program, and national sponsors have bought about 80 per cent of the available "Tomorrow" time from next October through December.

Before Snyder, 40, signed on to anchor the 6 p.m. segment of WNBC's two-hour local news show here, the station's ratings in that hour had been a poor third against competing news shows on WCBS and WABC.

According to an A. C. Nielsen spokesman, the three network-owned stations in this market of more than 6.3 million homes with TV sets were virtually tied in ratings last month for their 6 p.m. local news shows.

Howard said the two main reasons the flamboyant Snyder was brought to New York were (a) to replace Jim Hartz, then shifting from the local anchor job to "Today," and (b) to build up production in New York at NBC's Fun City studios, from where "Tomorrow" now originates.

Another factor in the "Tomorrow" shift, Howard said, was that the citizens Snyder interviews on the show usually are in the category of news, not Hollywood entertainment, and live here and in Washington, D.C.

Democrats platform calls for federal financing of the congressional elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic platform committee has approved a proposed campaign plank calling for partial federal financing of congressional elections.

Supporters of the plan argued Monday night that the apparent success of this year's system for the presidential campaign showed the value of providing federal funds for congressional races.

Opponents, however, contended that the proposal could commit the federal government to heavy new expenditures it could not afford.

No price tag was given for the financing plan, which was approved by the platform panel on a 68 to 30 vote.

The 153-member committee is expected to complete work by Wednesday on a draft document aimed at embodying the party's over-all stance for the November elections. The draft platform will go before the Democratic National Convention in July for final approval.

Delegates to the platform conference also approved Monday a proposal calling for restoration of the postal service as a government agency, but later voted it down after being requested to reconsider by Jimmy Carter's chief representative.

Subsequently, the committee adopted a statement simply urging improvement in the postal service.

The platform committee also voted to support a ban on cheap handguns known as "Saturday night specials."

But at Eizenstat's urging, the committee voted down a proposed endorsement of measures sought by gay liberation groups, along with a bid to put the party on record as opposing capital punishment.

"We are going to run a race against a conservative Republican," the Carter representative said. "There is no need to give him unnecessary ammunition."

Earlier Monday, platform task forces weighed various other issues, taking actions which included:

—Softening defense language in the proposed platform and supporting a delay in any decision to produce the controversial B1 bomber.

—Recommending that the federal government finance a comprehensive national health insurance program providing full medical coverage for all Americans.

The proposal, however, did not describe in detail how such a comprehensive health care system would be funded.

—Amending a commitment to the security of South Korea by adding that the party "deplores the denial of human rights" in that country.

Carter continues to gain Missouri support

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jimmy Carter, galloping toward the Democratic presidential nomination, has continued to pick up delegate support in Missouri despite the poor showing of his backers at the state convention, an Associated Press delegate poll shows.

But while the Carter bandwagon kept rolling Monday, California Gov. Edmund Brown, who urged state Democrats to remain uncommitted this weekend so the "process could remain open," picked up his first formal support from the 71-member Missouri delegation to the national convention next month in New York.

Carter, who gained only 11 of the 17 at-large delegates chosen Saturday as some party members balked at the call for Carter support by party leaders, gained three more delegates from the uncommitted ranks, according to the delegate poll.

The three latest switches to Carter bring to eight the total number of previously uncommitted Missouri delegates getting behind him in the past three days.

Brown, the only Democrat still actively pursuing the nomination, picked up the backing of two previously uncommitted delegates after telling party members here that "30 days before the convention seems to me a rather early point in time to totally and absolutely lock up the process."

A third uncommitted delegate has said he is leaning toward the California chief executive but has declined to make a formal commitment, saying, "We ought to see what he can do yet."

With the flurry of switches in first-ballot preference Monday, the AP talley of firm delegate support now stands at 48 for Carter, four each for Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona and pro-life candidate Ellen McCormack, two for Brown and one for Washington Sen. Henry Jackson. Missouri delegates are not legally bound to vote for their stated preference.

The remaining dozen delegates remained uncommitted although the names of two of them appeared on a statement in mid-May endorsing Carter and urging Missouri Democrats to get behind him.

State party leaders headed by U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton have predicted at least 60 members of the delegation will actually vote for Carter on the first ballot and some have estimated as high as 64.

Although recent events have all but assured Carter a first-ballot nomination, his campaign got another boost when Udall said his delegates could vote for any candidate they wanted. Udall did not formally release them, however, and that kept his support in Missouri solid at four.

"I've been instructed by my people to stay with Udall until we are released," one delegate said in an interview. Another said voting for Udall "will give the convention and the people to know there are people out there who want what he stands for and maybe we can get some of that written into the party platform."

State party Chairman John McIlroy, selected as an at-large Carter delegate over the weekend, said he expected many of the uncommitted delegates to eventually join the Carter camp but admitted that those now backing other candidates would be slower to come over.

"Once a person has gotten committed to a candidate, it's hard to face up to the fact that he's out of it," McIlroy said, "and they're especially slow to switch to the man who beat him out."

Some uncommitteds, however, have staunchly refused to step on the Carter bandwagon.

"People who selected me don't like Carter," one said while another added, "I would concede that it looks like Carter is going to be the nominee, but there are still things the leaders can do between now and New York that I would like to know about to base my decision on."

A man who has to hang on lamp poles to wobble his way home is a fifth-columnist.

Sex scandal rages on in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) Elizabeth Ray has told investigators she had sex on a houseboat with Sen. Mike Gravel after being told to do so by a congressman who wanted to influence Gravel's support for a public works project, a source close to the investigation said Saturday.

Miss Ray said her former boss, Rep. Kenneth J. Gray, since retired from Congress, told her to "take care of Gravel" at a small party aboard Gray's 50-foot River Queen houseboat on the Potomac River the night of Aug. 10, 1972, the source said.

The source said Miss Ray understood this to be an order for her to have sex with the senator. This was part of a pattern, the source said, in which Gray "pushed her off" on other men. The source said that Miss Ray claims at one point Gray threatened to fire her if she refused to have sex with a contractor whom she found repulsive.

According to the source, Miss Ray recalls that after her sexual encounter with Gravel, Gray told her: "That was for the National Visitors Center." The center, a $44 million parking and visitor information facility at Washington's Union Station near the Capitol, was one of Gray's pet public works projects.

Other sources say Miss Ray has told them much the same story.

Gray, an Illinois Democrat who retired last year, flatly denies the account. Gravel, a Democrat from Alaska, says he does not recall ever meeting Miss Ray.

Colleen Gardner, a 28-year-old divorcee who claims she was paid a high salary by Rep. John Young as a reward for providing him with sex, has told reporters she was an eyewitness to the sexual encounter between Miss Ray and Gravel.

Albert Ahern Jr., a lawyer for the 33-year-old Miss Ray, publicly supported Mrs. Gardner's account as "essentially accurate." Another source, who requested anonymity, said Miss Ray had boasted to a friend on Gray's congressional staff that she had sex with Gravel.

Ahern stressed that Mrs. Gardner had been the first to mention Gravel's name publicly in connection with the scandal. The attorney said Miss Ray "will not volunteer the names of those people with whom she had sexual relations."

The Justice Department and a grand jury are investigating Miss Ray's claim that Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, put her on the congressional payroll to provide him with sex. Hays, who hired her after she left Gray's staff in 1974 , concedes having had a "personal relationship" with her, but denies that her duties were sex.

Hays is recovering in Ohio from taking too many sleeping pills. The doctor says he does not know whether the overdose was a suicide attempt.

Richard Thornburgh, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, said it also will look into Mrs. Gardner's allegations that her $26,000 salary required her to have sex with Young. The Texas Democrat calls the claim "poppycock" but won't confirm or deny a sexual relationship with her.

Trader Finley dismantles A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Charles O. Finley is $3.5 million richer, but his once mighty Oakland A's are three more star players poorer and calling it the end of the championship line.

"We don't have much of a team anymore," conceded Sal Bando, an unclaimed item in the biggest one-day sale in baseball history. "But he built it. I guess he has a right to tear it down."

"There's no way those three can be replaced," said Gene Tenace, another survivor of the Tuesday night housecleaning in which Finley peddled left fielder Joe Rudi, relief pitching star Rollie Fingers and left-handed starter Vida Blue.

Rudi and Fingers were sold for $1 million each, moving from the Oakland clubhouse to the Boston locker room two hours before the game against the Red Sox, which the A's won 3-2 on the strength of Tenace's two home runs including one leading off the bottom of the ninth inning.

Blue went to the New York Yankees for, according to Finley, $1.5 million. Just before baseball's midnight trading deadline, the Yankees acquired Ken Holtzman in a nine-player deal with Baltimore, thereby reuniting the A's former pitching big three of Catfish Hunter, Blue and Holtzman.

Rudi, Fingers and Blue were among the seven unsigned players on the A's roster, and Finley said, "I made every effort to sign them, but when it got down to the last day, I had no alternatives."

When asked what he was left with, besides cash, Finley replied, "I don't even want to talk about that."

He sounded like a beaten man, one who had lost $3.5 million rather than gaining that amount. But later in the evening he vowed, "I'll rebuild. I'm going to use the money to buy players and I'm going to do it immediately."

Bando, Tenace and shortstop Bert Campaneris are the only remaining front-line players from the team that won world championships in 1972-73-74.

Hunter was the first to go, being declared a free agent after the 1974 season on the grounds Finley had breached his $100,000-a-year contract. Second baseman Dick Green retired, predicting correctly that the A's couldn't win another title without Hunter.

A few days before this season began, Finley traded slugger Reggie Jackson and Holtzman, both unsigned, to Baltimore for pitcher Mike Torrez, first baseman-outfielder Don Baylor and pitcher Paul Mitchell. Baylor is unsigned, as are Bando, Campaneris and Tenace, so could play out his option this year and move next spring.

"I can't see any reason to sign now," said Tenace.

Manager Chuck Tanner defended the owner's decision to sell, saying, "He did the best thing."

But Bando said, "I was shocked more than anything over the fact he took money instead of players. But he might have financial problems we don't know about."

And, shaking his head, he added, "He got $3.5 million for just three guys. They're paying $9 million for the new expansion teams."

Billy Williams of the A's said, "I can't figure it out, unless he doesn't want a team anymore."

But Tanner said, "I guarantee you Charlie Finley will be operating the A's in Oakland next season."

Johnson, sizing up his defending champs' chances of catching the frontrunning Yankees in the AL East, said, "We're both tremendously improved. We got what we wanted and they got what they wanted."

When asked where he'd use Rudi, with Jim Rice, Fred Lynn and Dwight Evans now comprising the outfield and Carl Yastrzemski holding down first base, Johnson replied, "I haven't had a minute to think about it."

The Yankees acquired pitchers Doyle Alexander and Grant Jackson and catcher Elrod Hendricks from Baltimore with Holtzman in exchange for pitchers Rudy May, Tippy Martinez, Scott MacGregor and Dave Pagan plus catcher Rick Dempsey. The sale of the three A's and the nine-player deal between Baltimore and New York were the big personnel shifts in baseball, but there was more shuffling.

Victorious Foreman looks to Ali

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — "I can whup any man I can hit — the Lord's always with the puncher — and the man I want now is the champion."

Was Muhammad Ali, winging across the Pacific for his $6-million travesty against wrestler Antonio Anoki, listening?

The measured, confident words came from the unmarked lips of a new George Foreman after the one-time junevile delinquent from the streets of Houston hammered dead-game Joe Frazier into retirement with a fifth-round knockout Tuesday night at the half-filled Nassau Coliseum.

The end of the ballyhooed brawl between two slugging ex-champions came with stunning suddenness. The bull-strong, 27-year-old Foreman nailed Smokin' Joe with a whistling combination of punches midway in the fifth round, sending him to his hauches. Moments later, Foreman landed a left to the chin followed by a thunderbolt right.

Frazier fell against the padding in the corner of the ring, blood gushing from a cut over the right eye. He staggered to his feet at the count of seven, his legs rubbery anf his eyes glazed.

His concerned manager, Eddie Futch, rushed to the apron and whispered into the ear of Harold Valan, "Stop it, we've had enough."

Valan obliged. The time was 2:26 of the fifth — even at that more than twice as long as Smokin' Joe lasted on that historic night in Kingston, Jamaica Jan. 22, 1973, when Foreman, a 3-1 underdog, floored him six times before wresting the championship from him in less than two rounds.

"I wanted to keep fighting," Frazier said after Tuesday's defeat, which ended his ring career. "I begged Eddie to let me go on but Eddie always knows best."

Some 45 minutes after the fight had ended and the crowd had poured out of the Long Island arena, Frazier emerged from his dressing room, a patch covering a stitching job over his right eye, and announced:

"I guess it's time to hang the gloves on the wall ... From now on, it's boogie, boogie, boogie." Both he and Foreman were guaranteed a million dollars for the fight.

Foreman, grim and mechanically merciless, an awesome giant with deadly hitting power, is now intent on reclaiming the world crown he lost to the tricky, rope-swinging Ali in Kinshasha, Zaire Oct. 30, 1974.

It's the only fight Foreman has ever lost — and he admits the memory of it tears away at his innards.

"I want to be an active fighter, I'm ready to take on anybody, but I think I should fight the top challengers," the 6-foot-3 contender said.

"The man I want — and I think I deserve to get — is Muhammad Ali."

After Ali's burlesque act with Inoki in Tokyo June 25, the heavyweight king has a Sept. 28 date at Yankee Stadium with an old adversary, Ken Norton, who split two decisions with Ali, once breaking his jaw.

Ali is now 34 and beginning to show signs of advancing age. Assuming he gets by Norton and doesn't retire, as he has sometimes threatened, it is unlikely he could duck the rejuvenated Foreman without following Frazier's path into retirement.

E. Michigan moves past Arizona St.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State came to the 30th College World Series with 19 straight baseball victories, the favorite tag and a team batting average of .348.

Eastern Michigan left-hander Bob Owchinko changed all that in a little more than two hours Tuesday night with a masterful seven-hitter to give his club a 2-1 victory over top-rated Arizona State.

"Owchinko was just a much better pitcher than we've had to face in some time," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "When you sit back and analyze it, it was probably a super performance by him."

The victory left Eastern Michigan, 46-14, the only unbeaten among the four remaining series contenders and ended the possibility of an Arizona and Arizona State title game.

Arizona State, 64-9, tangles with Maine, 29-8, in a elimination game Wednesday night, while Arizona, 53-17, will try to stay alive against Eastern Michigan.

If the two Arizona schools are victorious, they would battle Thursday night and Eastern Michigan would receive the bye into the title game.

Eastern Michigan gave Owchinko plenty of support in the field, including three double plays.

All the game's runs came in the first three innings and what proved to be the winning tally came on an error.

How Arm & Hammer® Baking Soda helps maintain your pool's ideal pH and helps keep your water crystal clear.

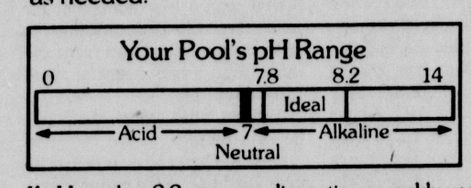
The 2 most important rules for easy pool care.

The most important rule to remember about pool care is to use a chlorinating product.

Recommended usage: Maintain a minimum chlorine level of 1.0 ppm Free Residual (Available) Chlorine.

The second most important rule to remember is to maintain the proper pH. And here's where Baking Soda goes to work. Baking Soda is a natural acid neutralizer and buffering agent which helps maintain pool pH at an ideal range of 7.8 to 8.2. This helps keep eyes from burning. And Baking Soda even helps improve water clarity—keeping your pool water crystal clear.

Recommended usage: Add 1 lb. of Baking Soda per 10,000 gallons of water each week during active pool season. Add a chlorinating product as needed.



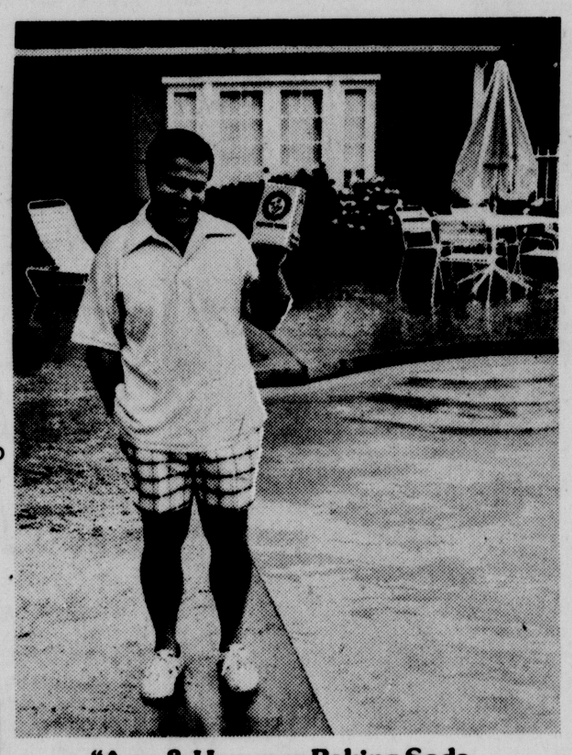
If pH reaches 8.2, you can discontinue weekly use of Baking Soda and use only as necessary to maintain a pH within 7.8 to 8.2. Do not use Acid. If cloudiness occurs, run filter (keeping it clean), until pool water clears.

How Baking Soda helps keep the water clear

Your pool water is filled with tiny particles too small for your filter to remove. Some of these particles make the water cloudy. Baking Soda causes the smallest particles to become attached to larger ones which are then easily filtered out of the water. The result is crystal clear water. If cloudiness occurs when you add Baking Soda, run the filter (keeping it clean), until pool water clears.

How Baking Soda helps keep eyes from burning

When eyes sting or burn and chlorine odors can be detected from the pool water, the problem is usually one of low pH. A low pH promotes the formation of irritating chlorine-nitrogen by-products. The best way to minimize the formation of these irritating by-products is to control the pH of your pool water.



"Arm & Hammer Baking Soda is a pool owner's best friend."

By maintaining your pool's pH with Baking Soda, you automatically adjust the pH of your pool water into the ideal range of 7.8 to 8.2. As a result, eye irritation is kept to a minimum.

6 Rules for Pool Maintenance

1. Test water daily.

2. Daily chlorine measurements should be taken to assure proper germicidal activity. Free Residual (Available) Chlorine should be 1.0 ppm or above.

3. Maintain pH between 7.8 and 8.2. Once every week during active pool season use 1 lb. of Arm & Hammer Baking Soda for every 10,000 gallons of water.

4. Check filter regularly. Clean when necessary.

5. Check water hardness monthly, particularly in hard water areas. High water hardness may cause scaling. If total water hardness (as calcium carbonate) is above 300 ppm, do not use Baking Soda until pool has been drained and refilled.

6. If heater is used: Operate filter at least 15 minutes after heater is turned off.

Note: On occasion, particularly in a new pool or in pools being opened for the season, additional steps are required to bring the pool into balance more rapidly or to clear up problems such as algae growth or mineral accumulation. When these problems arise consult a pool expert in your area.

Test Kits

An accurate Test Kit is very important to avoid inaccurate readings which can cause problems in proper pool maintenance. Testing solutions should be replaced at least once every year.

How to estimate your pool's capacity

The average swimming pool contains approximately 20,000 gallons. However, an accurate record of the pool's water capacity in gallons is necessary since this measurement is often used to calculate amounts of chemicals for treating the pool water.

The following formulas can be used to approximate the total gallons of water a pool will hold.

Type Pool	Dimensions in feet	Gallon Capacity
Rectangular	Length x Width x Avg. Depth x 7.5 =
Circular	Diameter x Dia. x Avg. Depth x 4.7 =
Oval	Length x Width x Avg. Depth x 4.7 =

Lowly Cardinals again rally but fall one run short, 5-4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lefthander Mike Beard is tickled he's back in the major leagues and so are the Atlanta Braves.

The young relief pitcher, who protested bitterly when sent to Richmond of the International League two months ago, Tuesday night celebrated his return by saving a 5-4 Braves victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was disappointed because I felt like I'd earned a chance," said Beard, who in April used a stronger choice of words.

"It's hard for a manager with only two weeks of spring training to form his team," he conceded, however, in retrospect. "I felt bad, but they told me I'd be back. Now it's up to me to prove I'm good enough to stay."

For Beard, a more acid test of his mettle could hardly have been devised than the task which confronted him in the St. Louis ninth.

Then, after relievers Adrian Devine and Max Leon swung the door open for the Cards with a walk and a pitch hit for a single, he was asked to shut it.

He induced Jerry Mumphrey to hit into a force play at second base as Mike Tyson scored and, after pinch-hitter Mike Anderson lined out, worked around a walk to Bake McBride to seal the triumph.

Royals fatten B.A.'s at expense of Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Another couple touchdowns and the Detroit Lions might have pulled it out Tuesday night against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Touchdowns? Lions? Chiefs?

Whoops, check that. It was baseball they were playing Tuesday night at Tiger Stadium and the clubs involved were the Kansas City Royals and Detroit Tigers.

But then again, perhaps it was slow pitch softball?

At any rate, the Royals slaughtered the Tigers 21-7.

Kansas City shelled four Detroit pitchers for 24 hits to eclipse the KC record of 22 set May 12 against Minnesota.

A ninth-inning thunderstorm, which ended the game a bit prematurely, may have saved the Tigers from giving up the most runs in a game in their 76-year history, and the most hits.

The record for runs against Detroit is 24 by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1912 and most hits allowed were 27 by Boston in 1953.

Just think. A victory would have been the 6,000th in Tiger history!

They'll try for that again tonight when they send their No. 1 pitching asset, rookie Mark "Bird" Fidrych, to the mound against Doug Bird. "Bird" will be trying to raise his record to 5-1, while Bird tries to give KC a sweep of the three-game series, extend its winning string to eight and raise his record to 8-1.

Kansas City had 15 runs and 18 hits after four innings, scoring five in the second off Dave Lemanczyk (making his season debut), four in the third off Bill Laxton and Ray Bare, and six in the fourth off Bare and Steve Grilli.

"I couldn't believe it," said Royals third baseman George Brett, who leads the American League in hits with 85. "It was getting funnier with every hit. I've never seen a barrage like that."

Brett was one of the lighter KC hitters. He only had four singles in seven at bats, with just one run-batted-in.

Outfielder Tom Poquette, the No. 7 batter in the lineup, led with a 5-for-6 night, five runs scored and two RBI. He had two doubles, two singles and an inside-the-park home run — when centerfielder Ron LeFlore slipped and fell in the seventh inning.

Leadoff batter Dave Nelson was no slouch. He had three singles in 3½ innings. The first drove in a run in the second, the next sent in two in the third and the last scored one in the fourth.

No. 2 batter Amos Otis walked twice, singled in a run in the second, hit a three-run homer in the fourth and a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Tony Solaita wasn't to be left out. He hit a two-out, bases-loaded popup that scored three runs in the eighth. The wind blew the ball away from third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez and Solaita doubled his season's RBI output.

Fred Patek singled in a run in both the third and fourth innings for the Royals. John Mayberry had an RBI single and KC catcher Buck Martinez had a single, double, triple and one RBI.

One run scored on an error.

Would you believe, Detroit led 2-0 after one inning? Alex Johnson singled in a run and Bill Freehan hit a sacrifice fly.

St. Louis-Saints game called off

The Sikeston Saints fame with the St. Louis Saints, scheduled for tonight at V. F. W. Stadium, has been called off and will be rescheduled at some yet-to-be-determined date. The next game for the 1-5 ballclub will be this Saturday at Cairo, Illinois, in a 4 p.m., non-league affair.

The Saints announced some good news today. With erratic hurling hindering the team's performance greatly, two new pitchers have been added to the roster. Don Miller and Mike Foster, a pair of righthanders will join the team soon and try to take some of the pressure off the overworked pitching staff. Miller's brother, Charlie, has been lost to the squad for the remainder of the season because of a separated right shoulder. Charlie Miller was one of the team's regular catchers.

Investors seek to save Scouts

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A last-gasp purchase proposition by a new group of investors to save the Kansas City Scouts from National Hockey League oblivion will be made next Monday night to the present ownership, a spokesman says.

Gene Novorr, a Kansas City clothier who represents the rescue effort, said Tuesday, "The banks have made it clear that they would be 100 per cent behind us, and the city has been very helpful. I can't see one hitch right now."

The Scouts, a two-year expansion franchise, are said to be $5 million in debt from dwindling attendance and sparse finances.

The NHL has given the city until the next league meeting June 25 to come up with a plan to refinance the Scouts, or the franchise will be dissolved.

Novorr said the proposal to be presented to Edwin Thompson, president of the team, will be the same offered by the Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association last month.

The Kings backed out when the city refused to grant them a lease escape clause in the event the Scouts proved too expensive to preserve. Novorr said the city has agreed to such a clause with his group.

If an agreement can be reached and the NHL approves, the Scouts still must keep its players from straying in the meantime.

Novorr said he has contacted six who played out their options last seasons and became free agents, Guy Charron, Denis Herron, Craig Patrick, Chuck Arnason, Jean-Guy Lagace and Gary Bergman.

"We hope they'll hold off making any move until our reorganization iscomplete," he said.

Smith traded to Dodgers for Joe Ferguson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Ferguson has been itching to get back behind the plate, and the Los Angeles Dodgers have been looking for some lefthanded power.

Ferguson may be getting his wish with the St. Louis Cardinals, to whom he was traded Tuesday night for switch-hitting outfielder Reggie Smith, who the Dodgers hope will fill their need for some gusto on the left side of the plate.

"He's going to play well for (the Dodgers)," said Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst after the trade, just hours before the midnight deadline.

"He's been close to a .300 hitter every year in the past and I imagine he'll get a lot of hits this year."

Smith, who has agreed to terms with the Dodgers, was batting .218, with eight homers and 23 RBI this season.

Schoendienst was glad to have Ferguson, saying "The big thing is, he wants to catch. There are very few catchers around, and I think we're lucky to get one of his ability. It will make us more flexible with three catchers (Ferguson, Ted Simmons and Ker Rudolph)."

Ferguson was expected to share catching duties with Simmons, who will be shifted to first base duties when the Cards are facing left-handed pitchers.

In St. Louis, Smith said, "I wasn't happy when they first came to me but I am now. Under the circumstances and the way things have been going, I think the trade was dictated.

"I'm glad they (the Cards) gave me a chance to okay it. I was scratched from the line-up and Mr. (Bing) Devine came to me and told me about it. The Dodgers had asked him for permission to talk to me, but nothing was concrete until almost the 11th hour.

"I will be playing right field, and for that I'm thankful. "I just talked to my wife and she said you always have to feel things are going to work out for the best."

NBA-ABA merger talks continuing

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — The National Basketball Association's Advisory Board, having met with representatives of the American Basketball Association, was expected to continue merger talks with the young league about accepting four teams, although an ABA owner suggested that a six-team concept would make far more sense and eliminate many problems.

The top officials from both leagues met for about 2½ hours Tuesday night and both sides emerged from this session with mixed feelings.

One NBA source said his league's Advisory Board was not satisfied with the ABA's proposal and financial status and would present a negative report to the NBA's Board of Governors.

However, Jim Keeler, assistant to ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, was far more optimistic. Keeler said the leagues had narrowed the estimated 100-110 issues in dispute between the NBA-ABA as described by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien to about 20-30.

"I feel the meeting was very meaningful," said Keeler. "I am very encouraged."

Bill Alverson, owner of the Milwaukee Bucks and a member of the NBA's five-man Advisory Board, echoed Keeler's sentiments.

"They (the ABA) came to play ball," said Alverson. "But a merger is by no means certain. We are going back to our Board of Governors for direction."

Approval by 14 members of the 18-man Board of Governors is necessary to accept any new members. O'Brien, who had said earlier Tuesday he believed that a four-team merger plan was most acceptable to both leagues, emerged from the late high-level session with little comment.

"We're still working at it," he said tersely.

DeBusschere was more effusive but little more enlightening on the subject. "I can't say I am terribly optimistic and I can't say I am terribly pessimistic," said the young ABA commissioner. "I am in the middle. I don't know what is going to happen."

The four-team plan would involve taking in franchises from Denver, Indiana, New York and San Antonio for the 1976-77 season, leaving Kentucky and St. Louis-Utah in the cold.

Ozzie Silna, principal owners of the St. Louis-Utah club and an uninvited guest at these NBA summer meetings, said, "The easiest thing for both parties, would be a six-team deal.

"There's no way thay are going to work out a four-team deal," insisted Silna, while pinpointing all the problems that would exist if such a plan was adopted.

Silna, in the process of moving his franchise from St. Louis to Utah because of the Spirits' failure to attract fans last year, said the roadblocks included a lawsuit by the ABA Players' Association, two suits by the city of Buffalo against the NBA, the problem of dispersal of ABA players from the two franchises not included in the four-team plan, and other pending litigation.

Blues trade Wilson

ST. LOUIS— The St. Louis Blues today sent defenseman Rick Wilson to the Detroit Red Wings. The transaction completes the deal made at the trade deadline last season when the Blues picked up goalie Doug Grant from Detroit on March 9 for future considerations. Grant saw no action with the Blues last season. Wilson was with the Blues for two seasons coming here from Montreal along with Montreal's fifth round draft choice in the 1974 Amateur Draft for St. Louis' fourth choice in the same draft and a player to be named later (Glen Sather, June 14, 1974) on May 27, 1974.

Letter to the Editor

June 11, 1976

Editor,
The Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Sir,

The public is not getting the whole truth on ERA demonstrations being held over the country. The media is not telling who organizes and leads these rallies and who participates in them.

The May 16 demonstration in Illinois was planned, organized and led by the National Organization for Women, (NOW). The radical and anti-family tactics and objectives of NOW are clearly spelled out in its own publication called "Revolution: Tomorrow is NOW" Here are something the pamphet shows NOW is for:

1. Abortion mandated in all hospitals, financed by the government and taught in all public schools.

2. Taxpayer- financed state kiddy-care centers for all children.

3. Pro-lesbian legislation so that perverts will be given the same legal rights as husbands and wives, such as right to get marriage licenses, to file joint income tax returns and to adopt children.

4. NOW's primary legislative goal is ratification of the E qual Rights Amendment.

5. NOW is trying to change the school textbooks so as to promote a "gender free" unisex society.

6. NOW wants to force the churches to ordain women and is even working to deprive the Catholic Church of its tax exemption.

7. NOW women hate veterans and are working actively to eliminate all veterans' preference.

Before the people of the 159th District grant another hitch to Congressman Cline, it might be well to ask if he has changed his mind on ERA, which he voted FOR in the Missouri legislature.

Even the above doesn't tell it all, however, because it doesn't reveal the obscene language and foul four-letter words that are part of the everyday language of the women's lib movement.

'Nuff said!

Mrs. Harry Bock

Dear Editor,

I enjoy your "Mini Pages". My name is Yvette Sherman I'm 11 years old I go to Masterson Shcool. I like them so much because they have such interesting articals & fun puzzles. There's one artical I like it was about Archaeology because my girlfriend (Lisa Hardy) and I want to be archaeologist. I'm sending her a copy of it. Oh, the reason I get the Mini Page is because my grandmother saves them for me. You've helped me alot in Math because you had an artical on the Metric System, my math teacher gave me some points for showing it to her and believe me I needed it (I was in the M range). I was wondering if you would put it in the paper? And keep putting it in the paper I hope alot of kid the kids like it. Thank You for reading this letter.

Sincerly

Yvette Sherman

Keep pets away from fireworks

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — The Bicentennial observances that will take place throughout the United States on the Fourth of July will be a source of joy to Americans but a possible source of misery to their pets, reports the Gaines Dog Research Center.

Firecrackers are a traditional highlight of Fourth of July celebrations in many sections of the country, the Center notes. Dogs, with their extra- sensitive hearing, are likely to become terror- stricken when firecrackers begin exploding nearby.

No dog owner should deliberately expose a dog to a noisy celebration on the theory that the animal will "get used to it" and settle down after a few minutes. It's much more likely that the dog will become a nervous wreck before the end of the day. Puppies are particularly susceptible. Exposure to such noises could make a puppy fearful of sudden sounds for the rest of his life.

During the 1976 observance, the noise level is likely to be higher than ever, the center notes. As a favor to the family pet, keep him as far as possible from the source of the noise, preferably in a closed room or in a basement.

Dr. Lamb

Child's blood: link to parents

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently on a television program a man said that a child had to have the same blood type as one or the other of the parents. Is this true?

I am a man 69 years old and was married 38 years and we had three children. Our marriage was fairly good but we had some differences stemming from her previous marriage which resulted in three children.

My blood type is O positive and hers A positive. Two of my children had my blood type and they resembled me both in looks and make-up. The other child did not follow either my blood type or his mother's but had a rare type of blood (two letters and a negative). He also looked different. Could this mean I am not his father?

This son is married and has four children. I love him, always have and always will and this secret, if it is a secret,will die with me. He shall never know.

My wife has been dead for four years now and I have not and will not marry again. I hold nothing against her in any way and expect to meet her again in heaven. Can you give me any positive answer or literature that would settle this question?

DEAR READER — The problem of blood types and parentage is sufficiently complicated that I think people should rely on their doctor for an explanation. In the first place, we all have two genes to make up our blood type. Your wife, for example, must have been AO not just A. Both of your blood type genes are O. Some people consider type O as a neutral or no blood type. That is because the red blood cells contain no substance for blood typing. A parent transmits only one of his or her genes to the offspring. The O gene is the weak gene. So an AO and BO couple (classed as type A and type B) could have a child with type A, B, AB or O blood.

You are talking about the Rh factor. Both you and your wife were Rh positive. Most of the children from such a union would be Rh positive but you also have two genes for the Rh factor. There is a dominant gene (D) and a weak gene (d) and each parent transmits only one of the genes to the child. Hence, if both parents were DD (Rh positive) all the children would be. If both were dd (Rh negative) all the children would be dd or Rh negative.

The complexity occurs when both parents have Dd (also Rh positive) paired genes. On a chance basis one child will be DD (Rh negative). This is how two Rh positive (Dd parents) have an Rh negative offspring.

To give you more information about the standard blood types, Rh factor and blood transfusions I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-4. Other readers who want this information can forward 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

If the information you have given me is correct I would assume your son is either type A Rh negative or type O Rh negative. And he would be your son even though he has Rh negative blood.

Love is not based on genes. Parents can and do love an adopted child as much or more than one with their own genes. The important thing in your relationship with your son is that he is a product of your own loving upbringing. Nothing can change that. Knowing that he can have a different blood type than the Rh positive type you and your wife had may help you feel better about your relationship with your late wife.

TV violence may hurt the advertisers business

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the nation's largest advertising agency says a survey conducted for his agency shows that many television viewers are turning off violent TV programs and may also be rejecting the products advertised on those programs.

Don Johnston, president of the J. Walter Thompson, Co. said a poll conducted in March shows that 10 per cent of viewers apparently consider not buying products because they are advertised on programs they consider excessively violent.

Eight per cent reported "consciously not buying a product," he told the annual convention of the American Advertising Federation here Tuesday.

He said that even if subsequent polls show only 4 per cent of viewers reject products because they are advertised in connection with violence, "I cannot imagine any advertiser who would want to risk negative sales of these proportions."

Johnston said the survey, although preliminary, corroborates other indications "that public hostility to violent TV programming is growing ..."

He said the J. Walter Thompson agency is "counselling our clients to evaluate the potential negatives of placing commercials in programming perceived as violent." Opponents of TV violence are organizing, he said, and Johnston predicted their actions will be felt "more and more ... in letters of protest and in product boycotts."

Johnston also said he personally opposes excessive violence on TV, and so does the agency.

"We are questioning that part of TV programming that exploits violence," he said. "We believe it is socially and psychologically damaging to large sections of the population."

Johnston said the agency's poll was conducted among 200 adult TV viewers. He said the agency has decided to expand the survey "to verify the preliminary results."

Among these results, he said, is that two of every five persons said they avoid watching programs they consider too violent.

Also, one of every five men and one of every three women said they prevent their children from watching programs they thought were excessively violent, he added.

Johnston said the agency's analysis of existing scientific and social research on TV violence reveals the following areas where it believes "damage is caused."

—"If they (children) are constantly given models of violent behavior, their behavior will probably turn violent."

—Incidents have been reported in which unstable adults have modeled crimes on television dramas."

—"Excessive doses of violence tend to desentitize even stable adults. They become indifferent to the suffering of others."

—"Heavy watching of TV violence contributes to the tide of paranoia that afflicts a major part of the population ... Caution is a useful emotion. Terror is not."

Mary Hartman to return for 2nd year

NEW YORK (AP) — It's official now. Producer Norman Lear will offer a second season of his hit "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" satire-and-soap opera series, still selling it on a syndicated, non-network basis.

There'd been some question whether his saga of life in Fernwood, Ohio, would return, as the five-show-a-week series had run its first season in the red — $1.2 million worth of red, by one estimate.

But Lear, in town this week on business, said the stations buying a second MH, MH season have been so willing to "escalate" the fees they formerly paid for the show that the fiscal outlook is rosy indeed.

He insisted he didn't know what the series would cost next season.

But he said the new fees paid by purchasing stations are such that "we're pretty confident we'll make up the losses this year, be able to pay the escalations (higher salaries) of the actors — everyone deserves a raise and every show in television faces that each year — and we also hope to make a profit."

He said 45 stations already have signed up for a second "Hartman" season and that another 45 are negotiating to buy, all of them stations that carried the series this season.

"And there are new stations coming in, so we think more than 100 stations will be showing the program next fall," he added.

He said taping will begin in early August, the showings in early October.

Unlike the first season, in which there were 26 weeks of first-run episodes and 13 weeks of reruns, season No. 2 will serve up 39 weeks of new shows followed by a 13-week repeat cycle, Lear said.

He said actress Louise Lasser, 37, the deadpan star of the show, and all the other regulars on this season's episodes will be back next fall, with some new characters introduced to ease their workload.

Miss Lasser, who made headlines in May when arrested on a cocaine possession charge after a disturbance in a Beverly Hills, Calif., boutique, currently is in a six-month, court-ordered drug diversion program.

Diversion is a California drug education program in which criminal proceedings against first offenders are dropped if they successfully complete the program.

Lear, asked whether her arrest and participation in the program will have any effect on the "Hartman" production for next season, said "we don't anticipate any problems."

What's the law?

The case of the air pollutant law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Fearful that oxygen would be air today and gone tomorrow, a county antipollution law was passed that prohibited the idling of motor vehicle engines for more than a three-minute period of time -- with certain exceptions. Almost immediately upon the law's enactment, Jake's Bus Company was slapped with a summons for violating the new law.

"When we walked into his garage," two police officers testified in court, "Jake's buses were just idling idyllically".

"Of course they were," responded Jake. "You can't just keep turning bus engines on and off every three minutes. Birds got to fly and motor vehicles got to idle -- that's the nature of things. Consequently, the new antipollution law is invalid and I can't be convicted of violating it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the challenged law and convict Jake of violating it?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the law placed too oppressive a burden on the public for the insignificant effect it might have on air pollution. Heaters, defrosters and air conditioners could not be used to keep warm or cold while cars were not moving, school buses could not stop for students for more than 180 seconds, motorists stalled in traffic jams would have to run their engines on and off every three minutes, etc. What is more, noted the judge, it is logical to conclude that engines burn less gasoline and emit less combustion when vehicles are standing still than when they are moving.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter wanted a noncontroversial campaign program that would offend neither the left nor right in the Democratic party, and the party's platform committee has given it to him.

If Carter wins his party's nomination for President in July, as expected, he'll run on a platform that should go a long way toward uniting his party behind him. There was so little disagreement in two day's of meetings that ended Tuesday that the platform panel adjourned a day early.

"It's the first time in 16 years that the Democratic party has been so united," said a jubilant Stuart Eizenstat, the Atlanta attorney who was Carter's top representative on the committee.

He said there was nothing in the 89-pageplatform that Carter couldn't support. But he quickly added, "This is a Democratic party document, not a Jimmy Carter document."

The key features of the platform are support for a national health insurance program, minimum income guarantees for all poor Americans, a program for full employment in three years and a strong national defense while also pursuing detente with our "traditional adversaries."

All spending programs would be phased in gradually, and only as the nation returned to full employment. If there is not a return to full employment, then the programs would not be fully implemented, party spokesmen have said.

There was no breakdown on what the individual programs would cost, but party officials have said the cost of all the programs, excluding national health insurance, would be about $30 billion.

Party spokesmen say that the cost of the national health insurance program — to be financed through a combination of an employe-employer payroll tax and general revenues — would not exceed the $130 billion now being spent on health and medical care in the United States.

The delegates approved a proposal to delay any decision on production of the controversial B1 bomber until February 1977 at the earliest, a proposal that is before the House this week.

The unity on the 153-member platform committee was never more evident than after it handed the Carter forces their only significant defeat — approval of a proposal favoring a general pardon for persons who opposed the Vietnam war.

Supporters of the general pardon, after winning the vote, followed up with an amendment that would provide that pardons for deserters be considered on a case-by-case basis. Carter forces embraced the conciliatory gesture.

The platform committee easily defeated proposals to legalize marijuana and measures advocated by gay rights groups. Platform statements on busing and abortion did not go beyond simple expressions of support for court decisions on these highly controversial issues.

Mayor John Poelker of St. Louis, an uncommitted member, said the Carter supporters brought pressures on delegates to influence key votes, but he added that most delegates appeared willing to cooperate, not wanting another election-day debacle like that of 1972.

"We're in much better shape because the various constituencies of the party were willing to give on both sides to come up with a platform that a candidate can support without behing hurt by it," he said.

Rep. Yvonne Burke of California, a supporter of California Gov. Edmund G. Brown and who frequently advocated a more liberal stance on issues, said Carter representatives "did some pushing, but they needed to push.

The platform is still subject to formal approval by the Democratic National Convention in New York in July, but it is unlikely there will be substantial changes.

In the pardon showdown, the committee voted 55 to 44 on a roll call vote to support a general pardon for persons in legal or financial difficulty because of peaceful opposition to the Vietnam war.

U.S. ambassador in Lebanon is missing

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — American Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr. disappeared today while crossing the dangerous front line between Beirut's Moslem and Christian sectors and was feared kidnaped, the U.S. Embassy reported.

Meloy, who arrived in this war-torn city last month, was on his way for his first meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis in the Christian-held Hasmiyeh district. He left the seaside U.S. Embassy in the Moslem sector of Beirut in his bullet-proof Chevrolet.

Embassy spokesman Christofer Ross said he was escorted part of the way by an embassy guard car. But the car left him and economic attache Robert O. Waring with embassy chauffeur Zoheir Moghbrabi to continue the crossing in the ambassador's car.

Unconfirmed reports said Meloy, Waring and the driver were kidnaped by two armed gunmen. The embassy refused to comment except to confirm Meloy and the two others were missing.

Several persons have been kidnaped, robbed and set free in the area in recent days. The Moslem side of the area is held by several Palestinian and Lebanese militias and groups of the Palestine Liberation Army.

On the Christian side are gunmen from the Phalangist and National Liberal party's Tiger militia. Militias on both sides reportedly were participating in the search for the missing ambassador.

Meloy was to see Sarkis at 11 a.m. — 4 a.m. EDT — the embassy said. Lebanese journalists quoted officials in Sarkis' entourage saying the president-elect telephoned the embassy to inquire about Meloy's whereabouts three hours after he was scheduled to arrive.

In Washington, a State Department spokesman confirmed that Meloy and Waring "have been missing since late Wednesday morning ...

Carlson said the wife of Meloy's chauffeuer received a telephone call that the chauffeur had been kidnaped.

President Ford learned of Meloy's disappearance from his national security adviser, Brent Scowcroft, shortly after 8 a.m. EDT, after the embassy in Beirut called Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Scowcroft.

Asked about unconfirmed reports that U.S. troops and planes were gathering at a British base on Cyprus, Carlson said he knew nothing about it. Defense officials said there are no U.S. troops on Cyprus.

Planning commission gives nod to proposed Section 8 housing

The city Planning and Zoning Commission Tuesday voted to recommend the rezoning of a lot on the corner of South New Madrid Street and Kathleen Avenue for a proposed 28-unit housing complex for the elderly.

Half of the property was zoned multiple-family and half was zoned commercial. The developers, GCA Corp., asked the commission to recommend to the City Council that the multiple-family zoning be changed to commercial.

The developers are asking the Department of Housing and Urban Development for permission to construct Section 8 Housing. The housing would be built by the developers and managed by the Sikeston Housing Authority.

HUD reportedly can allow 40 Section 8 developments in the state. About five of them are expected to be built in Southeast Missouri.

The request was made because square footage restrictions in the multiple-family zoning were too large for the housing. Multiple-family zoning requires 3,000 square feet of space per unit. Commercial only requires 1,000 square feet.

The development's units will have almost 2,000 square feet.

The development will have a laundry room, community room and hobby room. Hot meals would be served to the residents by the Heritage House kitchen.

City Manager Charles Church said he thought the site would be attractive to HUD because of its proximity to stores, churches and utility offices.

Church told the commissioners the city would only enforce those subdivision restrictions which relate to city ordinances, but not those which do not.

He made the statement in response to a question at a previous commission meeting.

Church said the city does have a section in its building codes that require a fence around a swimming pool.

A question was raised at a previous commission meeting after a commissioner was told a pool was being built in town and the owners did not plan to enclose it.

Church said the code requires fences to be at least four feet tall. A natural barrier may be

Radio, tapes reported stolen

Two thefts from vehicles and a store burglary were reported today by police.

Michael Blissett of Oran Route One reported the theft of a citizens band radio from his car between 10 p.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday, while it was parked in the parking lot at Malone & Hyde Inc., 1500 W. Malone Ave.

Steve Dupont, 818 Moore Ave., told police that 15 eight- track tapes were taken from his car between Monday and Tuesday while the car was parked at his home. The tapes were valued at $35.

Burglars broke into Bob's Salvage Store, 221 E. Center St., between 5:30 p.m. Monday and 8:25 a.m. Tuesday. Taken were two cartons of cigarettes and 75 to 100 pennies.

Police said the burglars apparently got into the building by breaking a window on the west side of the store.

Vandals arrested

Two juveniles were taken into custody Tuesday afternoon by the Oran Police Department in connection with a break-in Monday night at the Oran Grade School and vandalism estimated between $300 and $500 in damages. Chemicals were thrown on books, school papers, floors and walls and some desks were broken and hanging light fixtures torn down in two separate buildings of the school. Oran Police Chief Lon Buie said there is a possibility that more juveniles were involved. The two arrested Tuesday were released to the custody of their parents.

Ray wins in Lilbourn vote

LILBOURN— Ray Cravens tallied 52 votes to with the west ward aldermanic seat over two opponents in a special election conducted Tuesday to fill an unexpired one-year term.

Other candidates in the race were Sam Dillard, who received 28 votes, and John Pfeffer, who collected four votes.

Cravens, a former west ward alderman, had been defeated April 6 in his bid for re-election. He will now fill the seat vacated by John Baker, who resigned.

Tools taken

ADVANCE — Thieves were busy Tuesday night, breaking into Schneider's Equipment Co. and stealing a citizens band radio from a truck owned by another company, the Stoddard County Sheriff's Department said today.

The equipment company was broken into by forcing open the back door. Five chain saws and numerous other tools were taken.

A CB radio was taken from a truck parked outside the Co-op Service Station in Advance.

Both companies are located on Highway 25.

Health department suggestions for controlling mosquito crop

BENTON — Warren Manning, director of the Scott County Health Department, reported Monday on mosquito control recommendations.

Manning said control measures should be started now before mosquito populations have the opportunity to get out of hand. By eliminating breeding places and destroying larvae, the mosquito population can be controlled most economically, Manning said.

The compelling reason for controlling mosquitoes is to prevent the spread of mosquito-borne encephalitis. Several mosquito-borne viruses causing human encephalitis have occurred in the past in Missouri and could cause many cases in any year. Most encephalitis reports are received from mid-July to mid-October with the major peak in mid-September, Manning added.

He said the mosquitoes primarily involved in carrying encephalitis in Missouri are the culex types which prefer to breed in polluted stagnant water such as sewage drain pipes, sewage lagoons and stagnant pools along intermittent streams and drainage ditches. However, he added they will also breed in artificial containers such as those provided by trash, old tires, fish ponds, etc., around human premises.

While other mosquitoes bite in the daytime, Manning said the culex types prefer to bite from one hour before sunset to one and one half hours after sunset.

Manning said the following time-honored mosquito control measures are again recommended. It should be noted that these are usual measures which should be employed every year—regardless of the number of encephalitis cases being reported—to minimize the number even in low years.

Listed are some recommendations from the health department for personal protection and control of mosquitos:

For personal protection, if possible, stay indoors in the hours immediately before and after sunset; maintain house screens in good repair; and if you must be out of doors, wear long sleeves, trousers or long stockings and use repellents.

Eliminate breeding places, mosquito eggs cannot hatch unless they are in water. Look for standing water on your premises and eliminate it if possible and practical. Some suggested steps to take are: remove unneeded temporary water containers; flatten or dispose of tin cans; place discarded bicycle and automobile tires in places where water cannot get into them.

Fill in tree holes with concrete; see that cisterns, cesspools, septic tanks, fire or rain barrels and tubs in which water is stored are tightly

Bernie okays gas plant

BERNIE — In a light turnout Tuesday, voters approved a $200,000 bond issue to finance a gas peak shaving system for the city by an 8-1 margin.

The final tally was 80 for and 10 against.

The City Council met Tuesday night to open bids on system equipment, but postponed the action until July 6.

The system involves a plant which will mix propane gas with natural gas to insure a sufficient supply of energy during a hard winter.

Mayor R. B. Woods said the city owns its own gas supply system, but buys gas from Texas Eastern Gas Co. and has a quota on the amount of gas provided. A penalty is charged for gas supplied over the quota.

There is a daily quota as well as a yearly quota, and Woods said the city has no problem staying within the daily limits. During an extremely cold winter, however, the yearly limit may be exceeded.

If there is a 10 per cent overrun, then the penalty charged could amount to about $30,000 per year.

Last winter, the city used up its quota of natural gas, even though it was a relatively mild winter. During a more severe winter, the quota could be used up and the city cut off.

The City Council has been considering the matter since last winter.

Woods said the reason for the peak shaving system, rather than just providing the city with propane gas, is that propane gas is heavier than air and natural gas is lighter than air.

If somebody's pilot light were to go out, natural gas would dissipate rapidly, but propane gas could accumulate, increasing the possibility of an explosion.

By mixing the propane and natural gases, the fuel is still light enough that if a pilot light goes out, the danger of gas gathering and exploding is less.

A simple majority of votes cast was required to approve the bond issue.

The city- owned gas company is a money- making proposition, and the system will be paid for through revenue generated by the project. Taxes will not be increased to pay for the system.

Woods said that over the period of a few very cold winters, the system could pay for itself by saving the city from having to pay penalties for gas used over the allowed quota.

FORD VS. REAGAN ON DEFENSE

One week before the crucial California primary, President Ford invited a handful of newsmen from papers in that state into the Oval Office in an apparent attempt to put some distance between him and his hard-running challenger, Ronald Reagan. On the key issue of defense, however — the very issue on which Reagan has scored so heavily with voters — the President failed again to express a realistic view vis-a-vis the Soviet Union.

Mr. Ford was asked specifically if he agreed with the surprisingly hard-line assessment made by his Vice President, Nelson Rockefeller, during the latter's recent visit to Frankfurt, Germany. While there, Rockefeller said publicly that the Russians are imperialistically organizing the world "into a new empire on which the Soviet sun never sets." The Vice President added that, in light of the huge growth of the Soviet Navy, "the time is at hand to greatly accelerate the rebuilding of the free world's naval power."

Asked to comment, Mr. Ford said, "I wouldn't agree with the general thrust of that. The Soviet Union has moved in certain areas — Angola being the principal example. They have built a growing navy. It's not a seven-seas but it's a growing problem. We're in the process of expanding, modernizing our navy to meet that challenge, and our naval capability is far stronger than theirs on a world-concept basis."

More disquieting yet than the President's seeming lack of a sense of urgency in countering what many others see as the menace outlined by Rockefeller was this calm follow-up comment by Mr. Ford: "...I think we have to recognize that the Soviet Union has ambitions. We have our own program, our own ambitions; and where they come in conflict, we have to sit down and talk about and try to resvole the problems by negotiation rather than confrontation."

It is difficult to understand how Mr. Ford can equate our "ambitions" with Russia's ambitions — when the latter, from Lenin to Brezhnev, have chiefly centered on the destruction of our system and domination of the world. and, with the Soviet military capability coming closer to synchronization with this oft-stated objective, it is more difficult yet to understand how the President can appear so sanguine about our relations with Moscow.

Mr. Reagan has scored heavily against the President because of a more hard-headed, realistic assessment of the USSR. In a recent interview with U.S. News and World Report, Reagan said: "'The Russians know they can't match us industrially or technologically. But the Soviet Union today apparently is the only country in the world that believes that there could be another war and that there could be a winner of that war."

If America is to be adequately prepared to avert the twin hells of surrender and war, that is the kind of clear trumpet that this country needs to hear from its leader. Mr. Ford, for his own political survival and — more important — the survival of this nation, would do well to heed its call.

STILL CARE-ing

It was on May 11, 1946 that the first CARE package arrived at Le Havre, France, In the 30 years since then, the agency that was born out of the desperate plight of postwar Europe has provided more than $1.9 billion worth of food, emergency relief, medical supplies and self-help services and training to people in 77 nations.

Some 42 million persons in the United States and Canada have given $318 million to CARE, either as individuals or through their organizations. These contributions have been vastly magnified by stretching them out with U.S. agricultural surpluses and local supplies and labor from the recipients themselves. Last year, for example, each dollar donated to CARE was translated into $5.13 worth of aid.

"On our 30th anniversary," says CARE executive director Frank L. Goffio, "we say a profound 'THANK YOU' TO ALL THOSE WHO HAVE SUPPORTED OUR WORK AND WE PLEDGE TO CONTINUE TO SERVE AS A DIRECT CHANNEL FOR PEOPLE TO PEOPLE AID TO RELIEVE THE SUFFERING OF THE WORLD'S NEEDY AND TO HELP THEM BUILD PROGRESS."

JOUST FOR SENATE SEAT FROM STATE AWAITS IN WINGS

Presidential politics and scrambles for power in several U.S. House of Representatives districts in Missouri have put a budding Democratic donnybrook for the U.S. Senate nomination on a temporary hold.

But there are all kinds of signs that the war will be on in earnest as soon as the presidential primaries are over in mid-June, political sources say.

EACH OF THE major contestants has his own battle:

Rep. James W. Symington of St. Louis County faces accusations from some of his opponents of "daddyism" and "snobbishness" in his effort to succeed his father, Sen. Stuart Symington.

Former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has been wrangling with federal authorities over a long investigation into alleged corruption surrounding his years as governor of Missouri.

Rep. Jerry Litton, millionaire cattle rancher from Chillicothe in northwestern Missouri, is probably not known by more than a handful of voters in each St. Louis area precinct.

MAYOR CHARLES B. Wheeler of Kansas City, once a candidate for the Democratic vice presidential nomination before he decided to opt for the Senate seat, is in a war with Kansas City unions growing out of a firemen's strike some months ago.

Thus, each of the major candidates has been fighting his own battle up to now, with only an occasional jab at opponents for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

Litton has worked hard to build a power base in western Missouri, where politicians have always bristled at the fact that St. Louis has had the edge in senatorial power most of the time since World War II.

WHILE WHEELER has been generally regarded as an excellent mayor for Kansas City, most politicians contacted think he will only serve to take votes away from Litton and will have little effect on the fortunes of Hearnes or Symington.

He has generally been favorable to Hearnes during the latter's years as governor of Missouri, observers point out.

But Symington had an effective organization in Jackson County (Kansas City) several months ago, and Hearnes grabbed early endorsements from some of the leaders of the older, but still effective, Jackson County political factions.

On the other hand, Jackson County blacks violently oppose Hearnes for what they thought was unusually strong action to put down Kansas City rioting in the wake of the killing of the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. in the spring of 1968.

Knowledgeable political observers think Hearnes may very well pick up a slight majority in St. Louis.

"I think Hearnes will get a majority in the city, probably with about 11 wards (out of the total of 28), but I don't know how much," said a major Democratic political, who asked that his name not be used.

"IF LITTON gets three wards, he'll be lucky," he said.

"But there's no doubt the investigation of Hearnes (by U.S. Attorney Bert Hurn in Kansas City) has hurt," said the political spokesman.

The same view was voiced by two major Democratic politicians in the state, who also declined to be named.

"It's a real horse race, maybe even a photo finish" between Litton and Symington, said one. "Warren just hasn't gotten off the ground yet."

"It's Symington, of that I'm sure now," another said. "A month ago, I'd have said Litton, but he's just a little too smooth."

BUT ALL IS not roses for Litton in his native northwestern Missouri 6th Congressional District.

Former State Sen. John E. Downs, a St. Joseph lawyer and longtime Democrat, said Litton "has a good image, a good smooth operation and a lot of money, but he's really too slick and all this business about a western Missouri senator...I don't pick a doctor to work on my ulcers just because he's from my side of town," Downs said.

But Litton is mounting a major effort to become known in the St. Louis area, scheduling a "Meet Me in St. Louis" door-to-door invasion of the area May 22 by 6th District supporters.

DOWNS, A STRONG Democratic partisan, pointedly noted also that Litton's northwestern Missouri billboards make no mention of his Democratic politics.

With the Kansas City and St. Louis areas really clouded at this point, politicians are looking carefully at Little Dixie in central Missouri and the strongly Democratic Bootheel to bolster their strength.

But not much is happening in Little Dixie, a traditionally Democratic area in north central Missouri.

"Callaway County has been as void of political activity as it can be this close to an election, particularly in the Senate race," said Rep. Joe Holt of Fulton, a Callaway County Democrat.

"QUITE FRANKLY, no one around here is much interested in the Senate race right now, until the presidential primaries are out of the way," said a longtime Jefferson City Democratic politician who asked that his name not be used.

ANTI-SOCIAL SECURITY

Shirley Scheibla, writing for Barron's, has picked up the hot potato in Washington circles wherein employes of state and local governments are opting out of Social Security.

For the first time in the history of Social Security, employes of a state government--Alaska--have formally notified Washington that they intend to withdraw from the system. According to the Daily News, New York City, New York City also is weighing the withdrawal of its municipal workers, at an estimated savings of $200 million a year.

The Social Security Act provides that groups of employes of state governments and their subdivisions may withdraw after participating in the system for five years and giving two years' notice. Alaska gave notice last December. In addition, state subdivisions in growing numbers are opting out. Californians led withdrawals last year, with 11,909 workers involved, up from 2,649 a year earlier. In Louisiana, the figure came to 5,435 in 1975, compared with 2,912 in 1974. All told, pending withdrawal notices filed through the 1975 year-end involve 53,187.

Such developments underscore the mounting opposition throughout the country to payment of Social Security taxes. Members of the House Ways and Means Committee, which has jurisdiction over Social Security legislation, are being flooded with mail from people, chiefly the self-employed, who want to drop out of the Social Security System.

Distrust of the Social Security System and rising costs are the main reasons why those who can are opting out. Although the Ford Administration has estimated that the trust funds will be exhausted in seven years, it apparently sees no great urgency to provide a funding solution. But Dr. Robert J. Myers, former longtime chief actuary of the Social Security Administration, told Barron's the money is more likely to run out in three or four years. He cautions against undue alarm because he feels certain Congress will take corrective measures.

Historically, Congress has shied away from going above 10 per cent in the combined employer-employe Social Security tax for fear of a taxpayer revolt. But now the combined tax stands at 11.7 per cent, and President Ford has proposed boosting it to 12.3 per cent.

But it is the higher costs of Social Security that is an increasing problem. Paul H. Jackson, a consulting actuary, declares, "If you have 10 years in Social Security, you ought to get out if you have the option, because you'll have much bigger benefits elsewhere. Social Security is weighted on low average pay, and this means an incentive to qualify for a minimum benefit and then drop out."

Social Security experts on the staff of the Ways and Means Committee agree, saying, "The benefit schedule is weighted in favor of people who have worked a short time, and this is a real drain on the system." Those who pull out, however, lose their disability income coverage after five years, in addition to the right to increase their average earnings on which benefits are based.

Back in 1970, the growing opposition to Social Security was foreseen in Supplemental Republican Views filed when the Ways and Means Committee reported out a Social Security bill. They warned: "We simply must remember that the income a worker can devote to future contingencies is limited by his ability to meet the immediate needs of his family. If the cost of Social Security cuts too deeply into daily living requirements, people will begin to make unfavorable comparisons between current costs and distant benefits."

The fact is the federal government, especially Congress in election years, promises too much--and has painted itself into a corner on overspending Social Security funds.

COMPETITION IMPEDED BY GOVERNMENT RULES

Federal economic regulation of the nation's domestic airlines has benefited neither the airlines nor their consumers, according to U.S. Secretary of Transportation William T. Coleman, Jr.

"A naturally competitive, dynamic, individualistic industry has been placed into a straitjacket of a highly inflexible regulatory system which has impeded price competition, denied qualified entrants access to the industry or to new markets and permitted many anticompetive agreements," Secretary Coleman said.

"The result has been misallocated resources, numerous inefficiences and inequities, and most important, higher fares than would otherwise exist. All of this is paid for by travelers and shippers."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Now Hate Humphrey:

Feeling 'futile' over Carter, labor gears for wide Congressional power campaign

WASHINGTON— That old golf pro, labor's chief of chiefs George Meany, knows you can't really win the game in politics or on the links without a niblick -- the heavy No. 9 iron for a final, strategic lofty shot. Yet he never put the club in his campaign bag during the opening rounds. Why?

Because the AFL-CIO president really didn't have a party partner. So, characteristically Meany, aware he's known by the enemies he keeps, chose Jerry Ford as the opposition and waited. Thus labor's highly geared, heavily financed, overwhelmingly manpowered, computerized Committee on Political Education (COPE) simply idled through the primaries. Why?

Meany and his strategists (mostly himself) know Hubert Humphrey as the jack-in-the-box -- in and out, in and out. Scoop Jackson couldn't get off the ground without a multi-ton catapult. And no one knew Jimmy Carter.

The ex-governor didn't -- and still doesn't – know the labor "movement." But the Georgian did know what Meany long has realized – this year labor had no place to go but with the Democrats. Thus, the massive COPE machine will be unleashed for Carter though, you can believe it, inside the national labor headquarters the feeling today is one of "resignation" and "futility."

It makes no difference that neither Meany nor Carter is the wooing kind. Both are tough. They'll settle their differences later.

Actually it was Jerry Ford who wrote the 1976 script. He cut himself off from all sections of the "movement," step by step, union by union. The President could have kept some of them in his camp-- and today they'd have been his cheering section.

For example, he alienated the Teamsters, the old Dick Nixon allies (even unto today) by humbling the truckdrivers president Frank "Fitz" Fitzsimmons. This the President did by appointing William Coleman Secretary of Transportation without the usual courtesy call to the head of the 2.2 million-member highway union. Not a peep.

Then President Ford gave the signal for all-out investigations of the sprawling Brotherhood, so much so that scores of teamsters locals now come with a federal auditor attached to the local's records, for months on end.

Also Mr. Ford five times had promised his old friends in the leadership of the AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department he would sign a bill calling for heavy shipment of oil in American tankers, But the President vetoed it. Thus he cut himself off from such men as the Department's politically influential leader, the Seafarers' Paul Hall, as well as from the Marine Engineers chief Jesse Calhoon and the National Maritime Union's (NMU) president Shannon Wall. The latter has long been a regular Democrat so the NMU wouldn't have been in Mr. Ford's scheme of things.

But brothers Hall and Calhoon were old Ford friends. Hall was the first to endorse Jerry Ford for President shortly after the latter's appointment as Nixon's Vice President. Calhoon has been a Republican White House stalwart for years. But now Ford has said bye-bye to their chips.

Finally, President Ford cut loose from the powerful, traditionally Republican Building and Construction Trades Unions. This cost him whatever chance he had for Meany's 1972-type neutrality. Meany the ex-Bronx plumber is construction trades oriented. By vetoing the common situs bill which would have extended construction unions' picketing powers, Mr. Ford vetoed Meany.

So the AFL-CIO elder statesman, still as tough as any-iron, is in a position rare even in his marathon career to unify all labor around a presidential candidate. He and Carter all along knew that the AFL-CIO would have to take any Democrat nominated except Wallace.

For "losing" to Carter, one of Meany's intimates blames Sen. Humphrey in earthy language I've not often heard, even inside labor.

"There is real bad feeling over Humphrey," this source said. "He made Jimmy Carter with his fooling around; his inability to make up his mind; his 'punking' Jackson; his showing up on the scene like a vulture to get the applause. He really split our opposition ot Carter."

Then came a colorful comparison between "Hubert" and Liz Ray.

So what now? Plenty. Meany is about to make the rounds with fistfuls of niblicks. And COPE has some mighty clubs to wield now that it is about to be unleashed for the first time this year, onto the national political scene.

It's too early to predict who will take the White House. But labor's chiefs will wager that they take the Congress. Quietly, Al Barkan's COPE has been in the deep nitty-gritty of precinct politics. It has been registering its people in depth -- all the way from the Navajo Indian nation (with which the construction unions are now linked) to the Eastern megalopolises, through COPE's Labor Council for Latin American Advancement.

There are few black areas, except in some Southern precincts, where labor's A. Philip Randolph Institute isn't operating. Combined with the huge black vote for Carter, millions of blacks could be the Democratic balance of power in scores of marginal congressional districts.

Money is being raised through direct contributions, special funds (from which corporate Political Action Committees could take lessons) and even by such huckstering as the United Steelworkers political action card sales ($5 a throw) for which prizes, ranging from Virgin Island vacations to 12-gauge shotguns, are being awarded.

There may be a new boy in town. But to labor's well-oiled machine it's politics as usual. Capture the Congress. The President of the U.S., if he's a Democrat, will come a-wooing. Even if he's Jerry Ford. Ronnie Reagan may be the exception. But that gets ahead of the story–which is just beginning.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— While the public spotlight is focused on sex in Washington the State Department is quietly promoting sex abroad.

In faraway Indonesia, for example, U.S. Ambassador David Newsom has been notified that he will soon receive a shipment of over 50 million prophylactics as a foreign aid offering from the American taxpayers.

He solemnly pledged in a "priority" cable that he would strive to "greatly expand present usage rates." But he pleaded that the available supply is more than adequate and begged headquarters to 'ship Indonesia no repeat no condoms" in the coming year.

The contraceptives have been consigned to Jakarta under a perfectly legitimate program to control birth rates in underdeveloped countries. But, as is their wont, the foreign aid bureaucrats have wound up accomplishing a service far removed from their mission.

Each year, the State Department's foreign aid agency ships millions of prophylactics, birth control pills, inter-uterine devices and cans of contraceptive foam to underdeveloped nations. This year alone, the agency plans to distribute some $11 million worth of condoms and $14 million worth of pills around the world.

The bureaucrats run into a problem, however, when they go shopping for the best buy. To get a good price, they purchase huge quantities. This creates a surplus, which the bureaucrats must dispose of. So suddenly, American ambassadors around the globe find themselves inundated with pills and prophylcactics.

This is what has happened in Indonesia. The harassed ambassador was "surprised to learn," he cabled, "... that AID plans supply Indonesia 51,442,757 condoms during 1977."

He took a quick inventory of the birth control devices already on hand and concluded that the Indonesians already have far more than they can be expected to utilize, given the state of romance in the country. As for the 51,442,757 additional condoms about to be shipped, he cabled Washington despairingly that he "never and does not intend request these condoms."

Newsom cited some alarming statistics in his cable. "At March 1976 rate of condom usage (8077 gross) Indonesia has three years condom stock presently in country. Further 200,000 gross from (United Nations agencies) will soon be arriving, which will extend in-country stock to calculated level of over four years supply."

Not that the Ambassador is unwilling to do his part to advance sex in Indonesia. He would "try to greatly expand present usage rates," he promised. But he still felt he must "urge AID ship Indonesia no repeat no condoms during 1976-1977."

But in Washington, officials were not impressed with his problem. A spokesman told us that the ambassador had based his projectioins on "last year's figures." Explained the spokesman solemnly: "We're hoping that usage is going to increase, and we're trying to get them to do that."

Footnote: This isn't the first time the bureaucrats at AID have become over enthusiastic about population control. Some time ago, we reported that foreign aid funds were used to circulate throughout Catholic Latin America a birth control comic book written in Spanish.

The cover featured a picture of the Virgin Mary and the caption: "Little Virgin, you who conceived without sinning, help me to sin without conceiving."

WATCH ON WASTE: Coal companies will save millions of dollars at the taxpayers' expense if the Army Engineers have their way.

Millions are going into the mammoth Tennessee-Tombigbee Waterway, which may turn out to be the biggest boondoggle of the decade before it is completed.

The Tenn-Tom project, as it is known less formally, will be a connecting canal along the Alabama-Mississippi border. Already, a staggering $1.8 billion construction bill has been run up.

The purpose of the waterway ostensibly is to cut freight transportation costs. Coal will be the main commodity that will be hauled on the canal. Army engineers estimate that the coal traffic will reach 40 million tons a year when the waterway operates at full capacity.

This means the private coal companies, which will pay nothing for the use of the waterway, will get their transporation costs subsidized by the taxpayers to the tune of millions.

About half the coal that travels on the canal won't even be used in this country but will be shipped overseas. The Army Engineers contend that the coal exports will help the national grade balance and will create additional employment.

CIA FOOTNOTE: A group of conservative leaders, led by Rep. Philip Crane, R.-Ill., were entertained and briefed on the wonders of the Thieu regime during a visit to Saigon in 1974. Now it turns out that their sponsors were secretly funded by the Central Intelligence Agency.

The trip was partially financed by the Vietnamese Council on Foreign Relations .. The American guests came back parroting the council's line about the glories of South Vetnam. They also denied the existence of the vicious "tiger cages" where Thieu's prisoners were kept.

No mention was made that the council got $170,000 in 1974-75 from the CIA. Not even all the directors and patrons of the council knew about the secret CIA support.

Apricot Dumplings Are Superb

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Sitting around the swimming pool at the 7 South Street inn in Rockport, Mass., where we were both vacationing, Ann Gelles and I struck up a conversation. When I discovered that Mrs. Gelles' husband came from Vienna and that she had learned to cook some of his favorite Viennese dishes, I asked for her help.

I confided that the recipes I had tried for the famous Viennese dumplings had been disappointing — the dough tough and soggy. Ann Gelles volunteered a foolproof recipe for Fresh Apricot Dumplings (Marillenknoedel) — one her Viennese mother-in-law had bestowed on her. When the recipe was tried in my own and another test kitchen, it resulted in superb dumplings that delighted about a dozen tasters.

SUMMER DELIGHT—Fresh apricot dumplings made from a foolproof Viennese recipe.

ANN GELLES'
APRICOT DUMPLINGS

8-ounce package farmer cheese
½ cup butter or margarine
1 egg
1 cup flour, fork-stir to aerate before measuring
12 medium-size fresh apricots, unpeeled and pitted but left whole
12 small sugar cubes
1 tablespoon salt
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
Superfine granulated sugar

In the small bowl of an electric mixer, beat cheese well; beat in ¼ cup butter, then egg. On low speed, blend in flour. Form into a ball. On a floured pastry cloth with a floured stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out dough into a 16 by 12-inch rectangle; cut into twelve 4-inch squares. Insert a sugar cube in each apricot. Place an apricot in center of each square; fold up and pinch edges together; with palms of hands roll each into a ball.

Fill a 5 or 6-quart saucepot about ¾ full of water; add the salt. Heat to boiling; add dumplings — they will sink to the bottom. Boil until cooked through and they all come to the top — about 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon remove dumplings and keep warm.

In a large skillet, melt remaining ¼ cup butter. Add bread crumbs and fry, stirring often, until lightly browned. Add warm dumplings to skillet, turning gently to coat with the crumb mixture. Remove and sprinkle generously with superfine sugar. Serve at once.

Makes 12 dumplings — 6 servings.

Joy of Stitching

by ELSA WILLIAMS

BOUQUET OF STITCHES

My embroidery reflects my love of flowers which I enjoy growing and painting as well as stitching and I'm always pleased when students want to know more about how to create specific flowers on linen.

Perhaps some of my own flower "recipes" will be helpful. Remember, these are suggestions — not hard and fast rules. As a matter of fact I often vary the stitches I use on a single flower.

The rose with its exquisite shading is a natural candidate for the Long and Short stitch which can duplicate the color subtleties. If you'd like to get some of the petals to "lift" from the linen, work a single line of Spot stitch along the edge of the petal before doing your Long and Short stitch over it.

The iris, too, is beautiful shaded in Long and Short stitch. For accent, at the center of the most prominent petals where there is a definite color gradation, a small patch of dense French Knots adds texture. The tightly furled bud of the iris is effective in diagonal Long and Short stitch which give a spiral effect.

The chrysanthemum's spray of petals is worked in waves of Lazy Daisy stitches, pale at the outside, deepening toward the center. All are worked from the center toward the outer edge. Interesting color depth can be achieved with a single stitch of a deeper shade inside each Lazy Daisy stitch.

The spiky effect of asters or cornflowers come with many, many stitches, from light to dark. Try stitching the deeper tones first, working gradually toward the lighter and distributing them carefully so there is no solid patch of a single tone of color.

An illustrated leaflet on needlepoint applique is available FREE. For yours, write to Elsa Williams, Box 3788, Grand Central Station, N.Y. 10017.

Goldenrod and yellow yarrow are both lovely in French Knots, the former spaced along individual spikes, the latter closely massed in rounded shapes.

Tulips and pansies can be shaded in Long and Short with some petal edges lifted by hidden Split stitches. Use Bullion stitches — in yellow for the pansy center, in deep brown for tulip stems.

Whenever you see flowers in a garden or a seed catalogue, take a minute to study them in terms of stitches. In another column soon I'll discuss stem and leaf stitches.

Dear Elsa,

I see very few designs planned for monochromatic stitching. Is there any time when such a color scheme is an advantage or any type of design which looks best in one color?

F.R.M.

Dear F.R.M.,

I wouldn't say there are designs especially planned for embroidery in one color but a monochromatic scheme can be very effective. It's particularly good for a beginner who wants to concentrate on perfecting technique. Five shades of a single color in crewel yarn can create a handsome design and often will solve color problems in a room where bright or contrasting colors might be a jarring note.

Price rise seen for canned goods

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Consumers can expect to see some price increases for canned fruits and vegetables this summer despite abundant supplies remaining from last year's harvest.

Retail prices for canned goods in the first part of this year generally were lower than in the same period of 1975, but increases at the wholesale level signal an end to the bargains.

"Discounts have been on for most of the year," Lawrence VanMeir, economist for the National Canners Association, said Tuesday, adding that canning company warehouses were overstocked because of large crops and sales slowdowns. "Price cutting came about by companies trying to move the product."

VanMeir said canners were selling some products at a loss. "You've got all this stuff in the warehouse and you've got to move it," he said.

In February, for example, VanMeir said it cost 28.3 cents to produce a can of peas, including almost 11 cents for the peas themselves, 2 cents for labor, 7½ cents for the packaging, almost 3 cents for items such as taxes and about 5 cents for marketing, overhead, etc. At the same time, VanMeir said, canners were being paid 27.9 cents for a can of peas, a loss of four-tenths of a cent.

(The average retail price at the time was 38.3 cents, including four-tenths of a cent profit for the wholesaler and half a cent profit for the retailer.)

The government's Consumer Price Index showed that retail prices for some canned goods decreased from 1975 to 1976. The index for canned pears, for example, stood at just under 161 in January, 1976, a little more than 2½ per cent below what it was a year earlier. The index for canned peas declined about the same amount.

Cooking up

By CHERIE BLANTON

Well, I've done it again. I've gone on another diet and every time I do all I can think of are gooey fattening confections. I guess if I can't eat them I can still read them, and I'll probably absorb half a dozen calories through my eyeballs!

Ann Landers

'Sorry' mom advises against kids

Dear Ann Landers: Thank you for being the first columnist in America to take a poll on "Parenthood -- if you had a choice, would you do it again?"

Why were you surprised by the results? I wasn't. Parenthood is the most overrated job in the world. It's all pain and very little joy.

Our society's heavy pressure on young couples to reproduce is a hangover from the days when many hands were needed to work the farm, and thousands of babies died of diseases scarcely heard of today.

In the early years, it gave parents an ego boost to think they were molding a new young life. The experiences of so many of us prove that by the time that young life becomes a teenager, he rejects all parental attempts at "molding" and has no use for his "square" and "bossy" parents.

My husband and I have no one but ourselves to blame. No failed diaphragm, no missed Pill. We actually adopted OUR mistake after a long and happy marriage. The marriage is still hanging together (miraculously, I might add), but the "mistake" is causing us no end of misery. When one problem is solved, two others appear to take its place.

Our advice to people thinking about parenthood is this: If your marriage is good -- leave it alone. Don't take any chances on lousing it up. -- Among The Seventy Per Cent Who Are Sorry

Dear Seventy: I've received many letters from parents who say they are glad they had children and state frankly, "Those other people must be nuts." But according to my mail, the parents who are sorry STILL outnumber the ones who are glad, and by a wide margin.

I believe the logical explanation for this phenomenon is (a) the hurt, angry and disenchanted tend to write more readily than the contented, and (b) people tell me things they wouldn't dare tell anyone else.

Dear Ann Landers: Is it possible to be allergic to a person? A close friend (I'll call her Gloria) borrowed my satin evening bag in December and returned it in March -- with a cigaret hole and an apology.

She made no move to replace the bag which is what I would have done under similar circumstances. I have never felt the same about her since.

Now, whenever I am in Gloria's presence I begin to sneeze and my nose runs. Last night we went to her home for dinner and the sneezing was worse than ever. Immediately after the dessert, I noticed I had broken out in a rash.

My husband suggested that perhaps my repressed anger is creating an allergic reaction. Is this possible? -- Baffled In Groton

Dear Baff: Yes, it's possible. Anger can and does produce chemical changes in the body. It is also possible that you are allergic to Gloria's perfume or hair spray -- or her desserts. In any event, why don't you tell her you are still irritated because she ruined your evening bag? Suggest she make it right, which, in my opinion, is what you sould have told her back in March.

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers's booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap.

What's Cooking Over The Coals?

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

When outdoor cooking goes on at your house this summer, you may want to serve a dozen people or so a thick rump or chuck steak grilled over hot coals.

One way to have this cut taste good when it is cooked without moist heat, is to treat it with unseasoned meat tenderizer. This product is based on papaya, that delicious fruit, and it's the papain enzyme that tenderizes the meat.

Grilled rump or chuck steak tastes best sliced thin; to have it go a long way, offer it in steak sandwiches. For the sandwiches, we like to use French bread and have a pot of fresh herb butter on hand so eaters can slather the slices of bread with it before reaching for the meat. Any taster who eschews the bread can simply spread the herb butter on the meat. Your choice of fresh herbs will of course depend on what's in your garden or market.

STEAK SANDWICHES WITH HERB BUTTER

4-pound rump or chuck steak, 3 inches thick
2 teaspoons unseasoned meat tenderizer
French bread, sliced (2 or 3 loaves will be needed depending on their length)
Herb butter, see below

With your fingers thoroughly moisten all surfaces of the meat with water and sprinkle with the tenderizer. (If the beef is more or less than the amount called for, use about ½ teaspoon of the tenderizer per pound of meat.) With the sharp tines of a fork, deeply pierce the meat at 1-inch intervals.

Grill the beef 2 to 3 inches from hot gray coals — about 13 minutes on each side for rare meat or 15 minutes on each side for medium-rare. To test for doneness, cut a small slit near the center of the meat.

Remove meat to a cutting board or a hot platter and let stand for 5 minutes before cutting in thin diagonal slices across the grain. Serve with slices of French bread and Herb Butter so eaters can make their own sandwiches.

Herb Butter: Let a stick (¼ pound) of butter (salted or unsalted) stand at room temperature to soften slightly; beat well. Drop by drop, beat in 2 teaspoons of lemon juice. Stir in 2 tablespoons minced fresh herbs — chives, Italian parsley, dill or tarragon or a combination of these herbs. Cover tightly and chill.

How to wash worn wicker

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — I recently acquired an antique wicker chest that is slightly worn and very dirty. Please tell me how to clean it and take care of the worn wicker. —JERI.

DEAR JERI — I presume your chest has a natural colored finish, since paint was not mentioned. For washing, add one tablespoon household ammonia to one quart of warm water, and scrub with a brush. Rinse with clear lukewarm water. When dry a coat of liquid wax could be applied if desired. I am not really sure what you mean by "worn wicker" but if that refers to the ends that come loose and stick out to be sure they are refastened and the ends smoothed with sandpaper so they will not make snags in clothing. My experience has been that it is not easy to find people who specialize in repairing old wicker. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with those drivers who refuse to stop for a school bus. All states have laws requiring drivers in all lanes and going in both directions to stop for a school bus when its lights are flashing. There is a school bus stop in front of my house where three buses stop twice a day and every day I see drivers who keep on going in spite of flashing lights, honks from the bus drivers and children trying to cross the street in plain view. The police do try but they cannot be at every bus stop, for every bus every day. —EILEEN

GILBERTSVILLE, Ky. (AP) — There's been no Gilbertsville Tea Party, but residents of this city of 300 have revolted against taxes and won by abolishing the city that taxed them.

The end came when Circuit Court Judge James Lassiter signed a written order dissolving the town's charter at noon Tuesday.

The mayor and five trustees ordered the streetlights turned off and began gathering together their city papers.

Hubert Deboe, leader of the citizens' group that began the revolt with a suit three years ago, contended the services provided by Gilbertsville were not worth paying taxes for. The group had asked Lassiter to dissolve the charter on those grounds.

Unable to decide the question, Lassiter finally had it put on the ballot. The vote last month was 111 to 63 to abolish the charter.

"I'll just be glad when it's over and we won't be harassed by a little board that can't furnish us any facilities of any description and never would be able to," Deboe said.

But one city trustee, Jim Boyd, predicted that the residents who began their battle against the city with a lawsuit three years ago would find their victory a hollow one.

He said he expected a move would begin in less than a year to reincorporate the community at the northern tip of Kentucky Lake about 20 miles from Paducah — "when they see what they've lost."

As for the immediate effects, Boyd said, city marshal Lloyd Olsen, a retired physician who donated his time as the city's one policeman, "has ceased patroling."

"Gilbertsville lies along the main highway and has a 35 mile per hour speed zone and has always suffered with speeders," Boyd said. "There has been vandalism, and now that we don't have a town marshal I would assume vandalism will be on the uprise.

"There is a need for (street) lights, and that is one of the things we are worried about," he said.

Marshall County Sheriff Jerry English said patrols will not be increased just because the town has dissolved. He said the sheriff's office has always patrolled the area with one car and will continue to do so.

Lassiter said "police protection will be provided by the sheriff's office. We won't have a crime wave. It's a peaceful sort of community."

Boyd said he was glad to cease being a trustee. As for his records, he said, there is no Gilbertsville city hall, which leaves only one suitable city-owned place to put them.

Missouri Utilities cuts rates

CAPE GIRARDEAU — An electrical rate reduction is in store for customers of Missouri Utilities Co. following a decision by the Federal Power Commission.

The decision, however, has no impact on efforts by the city of Cape Girardeau to determine whether it should go into the electrical distribution business.

While that study is now on the back burner, pending completion of the budget and several other pressing matters, city hall said the study will be pursued in the near future.

Both the city and Missouri Utilities sought to reduce a rate increase asked by Union Electric Co. before the FPC. Union is the parent company and wholesale supplier to the local distributor.

A decision Monday by the federal agency involved a tariff hike filed last year for wholesale power.

According to a news release from Missouri Utilities, the company had intervened in the case along with other wholesale buyers. Union Electric's original proposal was reduced by nearly $1.2 million.

Further hearings were held in December and the proposed increase was further reduced. Missouri Utilities officers and council participated. The portion affecting Missouri Utilities was cut by $1,090,000 from $3,266,000.

Since the FPC had granted the increase on an interim basis this means that customers are also entitled to a refund.

Missouri Utilities said that upon receipt of additional data it would file with the Missouri Public Service Commission an application to pass the refunds to customers.

Electrical rates, too, will be cut somewhat, but the amount is uncertain.

Whites in Zambia disillusioned

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — As whites stand and fight for their privileged way of life in Rhodesia, many of their counterparts living in neighboring black ruled Zambia are becoming disillusioned about their long-term future in the country.

Last year President Kenneth Kaunda invited a group of Rhodesian lawmakers to Zambia in an effort to persuade them that black majority rule in their own country would not be as disastrous as they feared.

"We took them round and they looked at the farms being worked by white Zambians. They looked at life in the broadest sense in the towns. They saw black, white and brown Zambians all working together. We thought it might help them," he told reporters recently.

"The whole idea was to show them that it is possible for all people to be equal members of society. Provided they behave sensibly."

But although Zambia's 44,000 whites are better off economically than the vast majority of black Zambians, there is an undercurrent of discontent over developments in the country which until independence from Britain in 1964 was the white ruled colony of Northern Rhodesia.

Many whites say they are finding it extremely difficult to adjust to the one-party Socialist society being engineered by Kaunda.

Others, especially among the younger elements, are more adaptable and still strong in their determination to remain in Zambia. But an increasing number are opting to build a new life elsewhere, often in South Africa where whites still enjoy a priveleged, prosperous, free and easy way of life.

Prior to independence there were 74,000 whites in Zambia but since then the figure has remained almost static at around 44,000. Only 3,500 whites have taken Zambian citizenship. The rest either have resident status but retain foreign passports or are contract workers. When resident whites leave their jobs the positions are often filled by short-term contract workers.

There are no whites in the Kaunda government although those with citizenship have exactly the same political rights as the blacks. However whites hold senior positions in the civil service and judiciary as well as executive positions in state controlled firms. Others farm or still run small businesses.

Without exception those interviewed by this correspondent asked for their names not to be used.

Jack is a prosperous middle-aged farmer who has lived in Zambia for 22 years, and grows wheat and maize on his 1,000-acre farm on the outskirts of this capital city.

"This is God's own country for farmers," he says. "It is so fertile all you have to do is bend down and pluck food out of the ground. But as I see it there is no future for the white expatriate farming community in Zambia.

"I would sell up and leave tomorrow for South Africa if it was not for the fact that I can't get my assets out of the country because of government restrictions," he said.

Whites generally agree with Kaunda that blacks, browns and whites are coexisting peacefully in Zambia except for the occasional flare-up, most frequently stemming from derogatory remarks made by whites about blacks.

Like many others Jack complains about the fact that the quality of life for whites has declined in Zambia since the end of British rule.

The landlocked central, southern African nation is at present being squeezed by its worst economic crisis since independence. It is being caused by rock bottom world prices for copper, its major export and Kaunda's decision to close the border with Rhodesia which provided the main channel for imports and exports.

As a result Zambians suffer perpetual shortages of butter, cheese soap, rice and other items which fetch astronomical prices. A bar of soap costs $1.75 as does a pound of butter. Long lines spring up when word spreads they are available.

Whites such as Jack, with resident status, complain that because of foreign exchange shortages, they are unable to get allowances to travel on vacations abroad. However, this does not apply to contract workers who get paid foreign leave and can remit part of their salaries home.

In addition white settlers claim to be concerned over planned reforms which will alter the educational system and prevent them — and blacks — sending their sons and daughters to schools abroad.

Petrek named to SEMO post as vice president and professor

CAPE GIRARDEAU— The 48-year-old executive vice-president of Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., will become vice president for academic services and professor of philosophy at Southeast Missouri State University here, president Robert Leestamper announced Tuesday.

Dr. William J. Petrek (pronounced Pea Trek), who is also provost and dean of the faculties at Hofstra, a private university of about 11,000 students, will begin his new duties about August 1.

He will visit the Southeast Missouri State campus at least twice between now and Aug. 1, according to Dr. Leestamper.

Dr. Petrek was one of three finalists recommended by a committee established to conduct an open search for an academic vice president, Dr. Leestamper said. The three were interviewed on campus by the committee and Dr. Leestamper, and their credentials were reviewed by the Board of Regents on May 27.

The search committee began work in late March after the regents approved plans for the academic and administrative reorganization of the university. The committee consisted of six elected faculty members and two administrative representatives appointed by the president.

An advertisement placed by the committee announcing the new administrative post stated, "Criteria for the position shall include an earned doctorate, a distinguished teaching career, appropriate administrative experience, evidence of scholarly research and a commitment to the principles of collegiality in university governance."

One hundred and eighty-eight applications were received.

"I'm well pleased with the work of the search committee," Dr. Leestamper said. "They moved swiftly on a difficult task. I am looking forward to working with Dr. Petrek. He has ouutstanding academic credentials, excellent administrative experience and a sound philosophy of education. We are fortunate that we were able to attract a person of his quality. I feel confident that he will make a significant contribution to Southeast Missouri State University and this region."

Dr. Petrek will be responsible for the overall administration of the academic programs at Southeast Missouri State, including library services, curriculum and faculty development.

He will also chair the Academic Council. Council membership will include the deans of the six colleges which will come into being at Southeast Missouri State on July 1, the director of the library, registrar, dean of continuing education, dean of graduate studies and elected representatives from each of the colleges and the library.

White House dinner to be covered live on PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — For reasons that elude me, the Public Broadcasting Service says it'll spend the entire night of July 7 showing public TV viewers live and taped coverage of a quiet dinner at the White House.

The dinner is to honor Britain's royal family, which is making what PBS calls a "historic bicentennial visit" here, no doubt to explain that George III acted a bit rashly 200 years ago.

PBS says its coverage, to begin at 8 p.m. EDT and end at 11 p.m. unless dessert is late, will be anchored by newsman Robert MacNeil, Jean Marsh, public TV's most famous maid, and Julia Child, a cook.

It says the live show will include the royal family's departure from Blair House, the official receiving line at the White House, the procession to dinner, the toasts and the live entertainment.

Now we've never seen such a live TV dinner honoring a royal family, but we suspect the commentary will go something like this:

MacNeil: "The royal family is arriving and — what's this? Chevy Chase is right behind them. Whoops, he fell down. But he's getting up, he's saying 'no problem, no problem,' and the Duk is looking bemused."

Childs: "Oh, look, the souffle just fell down, too."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Not now, Jean. The royal family is being seated, Mr. and Mrs. Ford are being seated and — what's this? Ronald Reagan is being standed. Someone forgot his chair."

Child: "Tonight's main course is — meat and potatoes?"

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Please, not now, Jean. As we can see, the President is rising to make a toast ... Mrs. Ford is handing him the toaster ... the Duke is asking for the peanut butter ... it seems dinner is under way."

Child: "The interesting thing, Robert, is that the peanut butter is of the crunchy variety."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "I said, not now, Jean. Queen Elizabeth, as we can see, is chatting with Mr. Ford. Mr. Ford is laughing. She must have said something funny. No, maybe not. In fact, the Queen is frowning now."

Child: "Robert, if I may interject, I believe she said, 'Would you please pass me the colonies?' and may have been misunderstood."

Marsh: "Won't you please contribute to support public television?"

MacNeil: "Jean, I repeat, this is no time for a fund drive."

Marsh: "Yes, but how shall we pay for this live coverage?"

"Fiddler on the Roof" holds the record for the longest-running Broadway production with 3,242 performances.

Drought has spread through most of Upper Midwest

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — With the ground parched and the sky cloudless, the worst cows go up for sale first. Then the better stock. The corn is only as high as your ankle, half what it should be.

Drought has spread through most of the Upper Midwest — Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas.

The farmers cite an immediate crisis in hay and forage. Experts say severely curtailed grain crops seem inevitable.

Farmers and state agriculture officials throughout the region say the drought has lasted three months now. There has been little rain to speak of since winter snows melted.

On Monday, thunderstorms were reported across central and southern sections of the state, with up to two inches in some areas. However, a spokesman for the state Crop and Livestock Reporting Service said prior to the storms that at least four inches was needed to have any effect on drought-stricken crops.

Officials here say the crop loss in Minnesota alone has already reached $1 billion, one-third of the crop production predicted for the year.

So far, the biggest damage has been done to hay. Later crops such as corn and soybeans — two mainstays of Minnesota agriculture — are also threatened.

The farmers are starting to look to Washington for disaster aid.

"I can't remember when it looked any worse," says South Dakota state plant scientist Lyle Derscheid. He's old enough to recall the '30s.

Already, farmers who have barren pastures and no hay or feed grain are selling off cattle.

The Wadena County Emergency Board says implement dealers there expect to dismiss employes "because of discontinuing of purchases by farmers."

And Ralph C. Schmidt, a bank president in Appleton, in west-central Minnesota, says small grain there is bordering on "total loss."

Some weather and crop observers in Minnesota say it is the worst drought in 100 years. Wefald says crop damage estimates of $1 billion are "conservative."

The crisis extends through all of the five-state region called the Upper Midwest, with the exception of Iowa, which has fared better.

Scientists claim success with embryo transplant

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say they have produced a healthy baby baboon by transferring an early embryo from its original mother to another female who carried it until birth.

The development is a first for primates and raises the distant possibility that surrogate mothers also may be feasible for humans, a Texas A&M University researcher said Tuesday.

The idea of using substitute mothers for women unable to carry a baby full term has been discussed in recent years. Aside from the technical difficulties, however, the idea raises social, legal and ethical questions.

"The real impact of our work is in developing animal models for studying the process of pregnancy, rather than for an infertility treatment," Dr. Duane C. Kraemer said in an interview.

In the current issue of the journal Science, Kraemer and his colleagues, Drs. Gary T. Moore and Martin A. Kramen, describe how they removed a baboon embryo five days after ovulation from one female and put it into another.

Moore is with the Southwest Foundation for Research and Education in San Antonio, Tex., where the work was done, and Kramen is with the University of Texas at San Antonio.

The second female carried the developing male baby for about 170 days until it was delivered by caesarean section on Sept. 5, 1975, the report said. Normal average gestation for this type of baboon is 175 days.

Kraemer said the baby baboon, now nine months old, was "normal in every respect at birth and is the same way now.

"We have him running around with a group of his peers at the Southwest Foundation and the only way you can tell him from the others is by his tattooing."

Even with the success, the researchers said their work was preliminary since they only had one success out of 10 embryo transfers.

Oil drilling to begin in Wyoming

CASPER, Wyo. (AP) — Rainbow Resources based here and five other firms have embarked on a $10 million oil exploration program in Wyoming and Colorado that calls for drilling up to 20 wildcat wells, an official said Tuesday.

Rainbow Resources president Don Carpenter said drilling is scheduled to begin next month in the Denver-Julesburg Basin of southeast Wyoming and northeast Colorado. He said projects in northwest Colorado and in other parts of Wyoming would get under way later this summer.

He said 17 to 20 planned wildcat wells are expected to encompass nearly 180,000 acres. Rainbow Resources and the other five firms hold options to drill more wildcats in Wyoming's Big Horn Basin and southeast Wyoming if the scheduled wildcats show a good yield, Carpenter said.

He said four wells are planned in northeast Colorado and southeast Wyoming near where Amoco Production Co., has drilled several exploratory wells.

Garrison hearing begins today

KENNETT — Dr. Norman A. Garrison Jr., of Corinth, Miss., returned to Kennett this morning for a preliminary hearing in Dunklin County Magistrate Court on a first-degree murder charge stemming from the Sept. 8, 1974, slaying of his ex-wife, Lee Ann Garrison.

Stoddard County Magistrate Jimmie Trammell was to conduct the hearing. Trammell was designated as the special judge after defense attorneys disqualified Dunklin County Magistrate Leon McAnally on May 19. The disqualification move by Garrison's defense attorney resulted in a delay in the hearing, which had been originally set by Judge McAnally for May 24.

On May 24, Judge Trammell set the new hearing date for the Dunklin County Magistrate Court, the hearing to begin at 9 a.m.

The Corinth physician's return marks his second since he gave up his extradition fight May 7, three days before his return was ordered by a federal judge in Mississippi, who denied Garrison any further appeal on his lengthy extradition battle.

Garrison's first appearance in the Missouri court system on the murder charge resulted in his being booked at the Dunklin County Jail immediately upon his arrival and then his appearance before Magistrate Judge McAnally, where he posted a $25,000 bond with a cashier's check, and requested a preliminary examination on the felony charge.

After his appearance before Judge McAnally, Garrison and his attorneys were brought before Circuit Judge Flake McHaney, who offered to set aside, upon the defense's request, a contempt citation issued almost two years ago stemming from Garrison's alleged failure to return the couple's children to their mother in Kennett.

Over 45 subpoenas have been issued by the court, including 30 at the request of the defense attorneys and 15 at the request of the prosecution.

In Missouri, a preliminary hearing is not a trial of the accused for the offense alleged in the complaint but merely an inquiry to determine if there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed and probable cause to believe that the accused is the offender so that he may be bound over to the circuit court and tried on the charge.

covered; empty and thoroughly wash birdbaths and pans for watering chicks and dogs at least once a week; clean out rain gutters; examine flat roofs after rains, be sure no water remains on them.

Drain or fill in stagnant pools and swampy places, if pools cannot be drained or filled in, remove debris and floating vegetation; examine stock-watering tanks for larvae or pupae once each week or oftener, keeping clean and repairing leaks; fill around watering devices to prevent water from standing.

Examine philodendron and other plants in water in the house—although potted plants will not breed mosquitoes, saucers under the plants may accumulate enough water for breeding; check fish bowls and aquariums—not all kinds of fish destory mosquito larvae; check ponds and oxidation lagoons for larvae and remove weeds, vegetation and floating debris from them.

Control measures in lagoons should be restricted to using a very light film of diesel oil or kerosene, spraying the water area that has grass or weeds growing up to one and a half feet from the water's edge and using only a light film of oil on the water surface.

To kill the larvae, apply insecticide. For water not used as drinking water for humans, animals or poultry or for birdbaths or aquariums, you may apply a spray containing 0.5 per cent lindane, or 2 per cent of malathion, or you may apply kerosene or fuel oil full strength.

To kill mosquito larvae in a fish pond or ornamental pool without poisoning fish or plants, apply a light mist spray of a pyrethrum oil solution – usually obtainable in stores and called "pyrethrins" and "petroleum distillate."

To the suggestions, Manning added, "By all means, follow directions" on label of any insecticide.

In the final statement of the report, Manning said, communities may add further protection for its citizens by operating fogging equipment, but this approach should not be the only one and is of lesser importance than those mentioned above.

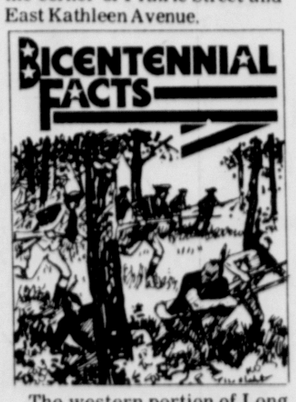
used if it is as effective as a fence, Church said.

The commission tabled action on proposals requiring a 25-foot setback on all structures in multiple-family zoning and calling for subdivision developers to install sidewalks on all arterial streets running through the subdivision.

Also tabled were proposals for increasing the square footage requirements in commercial zoning and subdividing a lot at the corner of Prairie Street and East Kathleen Avenue.



The western portion of Long Island on the Halston River at Kingsport, Tenn., looks very much as it did in July, 1776, when the Cherokees attacked a pioneer settlement there. The defeat of the Indians and a subsequent American expedition against Indian villages brought a two-year peace to the southwestern frontier.

4 injured in area accidents

Four persons were injured -- two of them seriously – in three area traffic accidents Tuesday and early this morning, the highway patrol reported today.

A Lutesville man received serious injuries at 12:45 a.m. today in a one- car accident on Highway 34 three miles west of Lutesville.

The accident occurred when an eastbound car driven by George Laxton, 33, of Lutesville Route Four ran off the road at a high rate of speed, struck two culverts and overturned.

Laxton received serious injuries and was taken to St. Francis Hospital in Cape Girardeau.

A Bertrand man received serious injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 2:45 p.m. Tuesday on Route N three and one-half miles north of Charleston.

The accident occurred when Charles Lee McKinley, 41, of Bertrand lost control of a southbound truck on a curve and the vehicle ran off the road and overturned.

McKinley was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital.

Two persons were injured in a two car accident at 9:31 p.m. Tuesday three miles east of Poplar Bluff on Highway 60.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Dale Allen Pederson, 17, of Poplar Bluff struck another westbound car, driven by Joe Dan Schoolfield, 28, of Cape Girardeau, from behind when school Schoolfield stopped in a long line of traffic.

Schoolfield received moderate injuries and was taken to Lucy Lee Hospital in Poplar Bluff. A passenger in the Pederson car, Larry Pederson, 20, of Mountain Grove, received minor injuries but was not taken to a hospital.

Swimmer continues downstream

FESTUS, Mo. (AP) — Wayne A. Thompson, with some 700 miles of the Mississippi River behind him, was to continue his marathon swim to New Orleans today.

The Portland, Ore., insurance underwriter reached this city south of St. Louis for an overnight stay Tuesday after covering 40 miles of river marked by wind-whipped waves.

Some were as high as four feet, he said, noting "It was really bad out there."

Thompson hopes to reach New Orleans by July 8.

Scene from Stephen Foster Story

Stephen Foster visits the Federal Hill plantation in a scene from "The Stephen Foster Story," which opened Saturday in Bardstown, Ky. The outdoor musical will play nightly, except Mondays, through Sept. 5.

Foster story opens for their 18th season

BARDSTOWN, Ky. — One of Kentucky's favorite summertime attractions, "The Stephen Foster Story," opened its 18th season here Saturday to a sold-out house.

The popular outdoor musical with its lavish period costumes and romantic story has played to over 900,000 patrons during its run and seems to have even stronger audience appeal during this Bicentennial year when many American's are looking at their history.

The show, written by Pulitzer Prize- winner Paul Green, is set during 1849 and 1850 and tells of the complications involved in the writing of Foster's most famous piece, "My Old Kentucky Home".

Playing Stephen Foster for a fourth season is Reese Holcombe; Jeanie is played for a fourth time by Daune Mahy. Both performers have extensive operatic and musical theatre experience.

"The Stephen Foster Story" will play nightly, except Mondays, through Sept. 5 at 8:30 p.m. EDT. Reservations and information are available by writing P.O. Box D, Bardstown, Ky., or by calling telephone number 502-348-5971.

Bingham shirts to be sold to aid in buying drawings

Handsome hand- made shirts, patterned after the shirts popular among 19th Century Missouri rivermen and drawn repeatedly by George Caleb Bingham as he traveled across the state more than 100 years ago, are being sold throughout Missouri as part of the drive to buy the 112-work collection of Bingham drawings for the people.

A total of 600 of the shirts are being made by volunteers in dozens of Missouri communities as a joint undertaking of the Missouri Women's Bingham Shirt Project, a group formed for this purpose, and the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, which has designated the efforts as its Bicentennial project.

Each shirt is being sold for $20, with all proceeds going to the campaign to save the Bingham drawings as a collection owned by the people of Missouri. Thus the sale of all 600 shirts would realize $12,000 for the campaign.

Bingham Sketches, Inc. must obtain $1.8 million in contributions and pledges if the collection is not to be broken up and the bulk of the drawings sold individually, probably at public auction in the East. About $1,075,000 has been raised privately so far and $500,000 has been appropriated by the Missouri Legislature, leaving about $225,000 to be raised before the June 30 deadline.

One of Bingham's drawings, titled "Riverman", has been reserved for the people in the name of the Shirt Project if shirt sales meet or exceed the drawing's $10,000 appraised value.

The shirts are being made in small, medium and large sizes of a modern, easy- to- care for fabric with a homespun look. It is loose-fitting, with sleeves gathered and attached below the shoulder and is suitable for either men or women.

Mrs. Burt Rowe of Sikeston, a member of the Binhgam Citizens Committee spearheading the fund drive and Mrs. William Crowder of University City, state art chairman of the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, are co-coordinators of the shirt project.

"The extraordinary thing about this project is that everything has been donated," Mrs. Crowder remarked. "The fabric, the thread, the tags, even the shirtboxes." And, of course, the work by the volunteers.

John G. Rowan, president of Elder Manufacturing Co. in St. Louis, donated 500 yards of fabric that normally sells for up to $3 a yard.

Through the efforts of Robert Trebesch at Montgomery Ward's regional office in Kansas City, 1,000 additional yards of cloth were made available by his company at 65 cents a yard and paid for with $650 contributed by two anonymous donors in St. Louis.

The 600 spools of thread required were donated by Rex Lambert of Lambert's Fabrics, Cape Girardeau. Cumbee's Fabrics, Sikeston, gave gold safety pins and The Daily Standard contributed the tags which tell about the shirts and the Bingham drawings. Jean's Studio of Sikeston contributed a negative of the drawing, "Riverman", which is printed on the tags and various Sikeston merchants provided boxes.

Mrs. Arlene Powell of the University of Missouri Extension Service in Jefferson City, a professional pattern drafter, designed the pattern in three sizes and members of the Jefferson City Women's Club spent a total of 600 hours making about 150 patterns.

Members of the St. Louis and Sedalia clubs cut the fabric into two-and-a-half yard lengths and Sikeston women packaged kits to send to the seamstresses, who are making one to five shirts each.

Many of the shirts were spoken for before they were made; others are on sale in selected stores which have agreed to remit the entire $20 price to the Bingham campaign.

"The cooperation of everyone connected with this project has been truly impressive, and without every bit of it, we would have failed," Mrs. Rowe said of the project.

"Hundreds of persons have donated their time, their money and their skills to make it possible. As a result, Missourians have the opportunity to buy a very distinctive shirt at a very low price and at the same time help save Bingham's wonderful drawings for our state and its people."

Information on how to obtain a Bingham shirt may be obtained from Mrs. Burt Rowe, Box 909, Sikeston, Mo. 63801, Mrs. William Crowder, 439 North Jackson Ave., University City, Mo., 63130, local women's clubs in the Missouri Federation and local participants in the project.

Contributions to the Bingham campaign, which are tax-deductible, may be sent to Bingham Sketches, Inc., P.O. Box 720, Jefferson City, Mo. 65101.

Boys Town to have a large deficit

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—Boys Town officials say the "City of Little Men" will have an operating budget deficit of about $1 million this year and a $500,000 deficit next year.

Inflation, increasing expenses, and rising fund-raising costs have slowed completion of some Boys Town projects, officials said. And they hope to balance the budget in 1978.

People can't believe Boys Town has a budget deficit and could be heading in to financial difficulties if action isn't taken, said the Rev. Robert P. Hupp, director. "But it is true."

To cut back, officials will not buy some equipment and room furnishings for the speech-hearing institute and child study center now under contruction.

The home also will trim some staff and delay hiring new personnel in some areas, Father Hupp said. No big capital expenditures will be undertaken until the budget is balanced, he said.

However, Father Hupp said, no cutbacks will be made in direct services to boys. Renovations of cottages, for example, will continue.

The home has an annual operating budget of about $18 million. Officials hope to meet the budget with income from the home's endowment fund and with contributions, most of which come from the home's spring and Christmas mail appeals.

The effort has been falling short and the home is dipping into its endowment fund, the officials said.

At the end of 1975, the fund stood at $194.1 million, compared to the 1974 figure of $202.2 million, the home's financial report showed.

If the home continues to spend from its endowment fund, it would be in financial difficulty within a few years, both Father Hupp and Ramsey said.

Also, they said, the home's direct mail appeals aren't as productive as they once were.

Income from mail appeals and bequests decreased from $10.9 million in 1974 to $9.9 million in 1975, the financial report showed.

The average gift to Boys Town has remained between $3 and $4 over the years, Ramsey said, but the amount does't go as far today far as it once did. And the rise in postage and stationery costs have cut into the mail income.

The home's total assets at the end of 1975 were $242.1 million, officials said.

Mills argues reports on alcoholism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Wilbur Mills, whose bout with alcoholism cost him his committee chairmanship, has criticized a report that indicated some alcoholics could take up normal drinking patterns after being treated.

"I know enough about the illness to recognize the dangers to alcoholics of any encouragement based upon so-called scientific research that would lead them to believe that there is a permanent cure for alcoholism," he said in a statement issued by his office Saturday.

The report, prepared by the Rand Corp., said that after some alcoholics are treated, they can resume drinking alcohol with no more danger of a relapse than if they abstained.

It was written by Dr. David Armor and was based on case histories and studies of people treated for alcoholism around the country.

Mills resigned as chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee after his well-publicized appearances with stripper Fanne Foxe in 1974 and underwent months of treatment for alcoholism in a private hospital.

The Arkansas Democrat has been active in Alcoholics Anonymous, and has spoken publicly about alcohol abuse.

He said in an interview that reports such as that issued by Rand can be "disastrous" for alcoholics.

Such reports, he said "are liable to have caused a lot of alcoholics to go back and take a drink."

"Perhaps those that conducted the study are not as informed as they thought themselves to be and confused alcoholics with heavy drinkers without recognizing the difference," said Mills in his statement.

"A heavy drinker's drinking ... can be controlled but the only way alcoholism can be cured is through total abstinence," he said. "This has been proven time and time again by people who are alcoholics and attempt to drink again."

Ray held information for a year

NEW YORK (AP) — Elizabeth Ray withheld public disclosure that she was Rep. Wayne Hays' mistress for almost a year on the advice of her publisher o the publicity could be timed to benefit her novel.

Sarah Gallick, publicity director for the Dell publishing firm, said Saturday that two Washington Post reporters had repeatedly asked Miss Ray for the story of her relationship with Hays.

"I asked her not to give the story until we were ready," said Ms. Gallick, who prefers the feminist designation. "She wanted to work it out so it would be good for the book."

Miss Ray, in London over the weekend promoting her book, "The Washington Fringe Benefit," has charged that Hays put her on his congressional payroll to serve as his mistress. Hays has acknowledged a "personal relationship" with Miss Ray but denied she was on the payroll for sex.

Ms. Gallick said Dell editor-in-chief William Grose bought an outline and proposal for the book from Miss Ray's agent, John Cushman, about a year ago.

She indicated the relatively slim novel, ghostwritten by Yvonne Dunleavy, went through a number of rewrites. "I kept reading the manuscript and then the lawyers would look at it, and they would take out all the good parts," she said.

When the lawyers finished and it was ready to go to the Dell salesmen, "I let her talk to the Post," which broke the story, said Ms. Gallick. "I thought the publicity would help the sales."

But she said the story was far bigger than Dell had anticipated. "None of us realized how powerful Wayne Hays was in Washington ... The Washington Post people kept educating us in how powerful Hays was," she said.

The book had been scheduled to come out in August, she said, "but the story became so sensational that we moved the book up."

Mailmen fight lawn crossing issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The letter carriers' union is fighting a Postal Service order that mailmen must walk across residents' lawns to deliver the mail faster.

Arbitration on the issue begins here Wednesday before Paul Fasser, a former assistant secretary of Labor.

"We are saying that management has the right to require letter carriers to cross lawns," a Postal Service spokesman said.

"The whole idea is to save time and money by delivering mail in the most efficient way possible," he said.

James Rademacher, president of the 200,000-member National Association of Letter Carriers, said, "It's ridiculous to make letter carriers trespass on the lawns of the American people as part of an economy program for the Postal Service."

Many letter carriers already walk across lawns but the Postal Service has been moving to require it when it is the quickest route to the mailbox.

The arbitration centers around a clause in the Postal Service's contract with its labor unions providing that, "Letter carriers may cross lawns while making deliveries if customers do not object and there are no particular hazards to the customer."

Rademacher said the word "may" is permissive. "This means it is up to the letter carrier," the union leader said.

But postal management has used the provision as authority for ordering the lawn crossings. "This is a proper interpretation of the agreement," the Postal Service spokesman said.

He stressed that anyone can avoid having his lawn crossed simply by registering an objection with the Postal Service.

Meanwhile, a second arbitration case brought by the union against a different Postal Service efficiency plan is not expected to be decided before this fall, sources said.

This case involves the so-called Kokomo plan, under which computers would be used to redraw delivery routes to insure that every letter carrier would have eight hours of work per day.

Motorists continue to burn gas at record pace

WASHINGTON (AP) — American motorists are burning gasoline at a record pace this year despite two years of government energy conservation efforts.

Govermment experts say it is too early to tell whether 1976 will be a record year for gasoline consumption but preliminary figures from the Federal Highway Administration show more gasoline was used in the first three months of this year than in the same period of 1973, the previous record.

Federal Energy Administration estimates also show the demand for gasoline was up in April and the first three weeks of May. Heavy vacation travel this summer could increase the average daily consumption even more.

The FEA says it does not expect any shortages this year unless there is another oil embargo or a major refinery fire.

The increased consumption comes despite lower speed limits imposed as a gasoline and life-saving move and the trend toward smaller, more fuel-efficient cars.

Most of the increase apparently results from increased highway driving. Government statistics show that motorists generally are staying close to the 55 m.p.h. national speed limit. There still are not enough small cars to effect consumption one way or the other.

Federal Highway Administration gasoline figures, based on tax collections from gasoline sales, show an estimated 6.4 million barrels of oil were burned as gasoline in January, or about 200,000 barrels more than were used in the same month of 1973. Consumption rose to more than 7 million barrels per day in February, or nearly 330,000 barrels more than in February of 1973. March figures show that about 6.7 million barrels of oil were used as gasoline for an increase of nearly 180,000 barrels over the March 1973, figure.

The figures are estimates and are based on incomplete data, the highway administration's Kent Bramlett says. The January figures, for example, are based on tax figures from 49 states but the March figures are based on returns from only 31 states.

Asked if the nation may be heading for a gas consumption record, Bramlett said: "If it continues, it would be a record. But we don't attempt to establish a trend figure until we have data for at least six months. I wouldn't attempt to make a judgment this early."

Federal Energy Administration figures show demand for gasoline for the four-week period ending May 21 was up 7.8 per cent from the same period last year and 4.4 per cent over the 1973 levels. A spokesman for the agency says it estimates 7.2 million barrels of oil were burned as gasoline each day during the four-week period compared to 6.9 million barrels per day in 1973.

The key figure in gasoline consumption is the rate of annual growth. Federal officials have always expected gasoline usage to grow each year, given a growing population and more cars on the road.

Prior to the embargo, gasoline consumption was growing at a steady 5 or 6 per cent a year. It was the government hope that through voluntary conservation, the 55 m.p.h. speed limit and smaller cars, this could be held down to about 3 or 4 per cent. But with consumption for this year already estimated at more than 7 per cent ahead of last year, the country seems to heading back to its old gasoline guzzling ways.

The result of the increase in consumption is increasing dependence on foreign oil and a stronger bargaining position for major foreign oil exporters. Imports now account for 40 per cent of the nation's oil consumption compared with 36 per cent in 1973, FEA says.

No one knows how much motorists are traveling now that warm weather is here, but the Federal Highway Administration says automobile travel totalled 313.4 billion vehicle miles in the first quarter of 1976 compared with 298.2 billion vehicle miles in the same period of 1975. A vehicle mile is a measurement obtained by multiplying the number of vehicles times the number of miles traveled.

If the 5.1 per cent increase recorded in the first quarter holds true for the remainder of the year, motorists will total just under 1,400 billion vehicle miles for the year. In comparison, the nation recorded 1,308.3 billion vehicle miles in 1973.

No one is quite sure why travel is up so much but government officials note that more and more cars are being added to the road each year and that more women are driving now than in the past. The added umber of women drivers may mean that family cars are being used more during the day.

The Federal Highway Administration estimates there were 107 milion passenger cars registered in 1975 compared to 101 million registered in 1973. About 54.7 per cent of all licensed drivers in 1974 were males compared to 55.2 per cent the previous year and 72 per cent in 1952.

Officials also note the improving economy means some families who stayed at home in the past few years may now be taking to the road for short vacation outings.

Travel speeds have been creeping upward lately but the change is not large enough to have had a major effect on the increased consumption of gasoline.

Frank Jarima, who compiles state speed reports for the highway administration, says the average highway speed of cars measured in free-flowing traffic in 1975 was 55.8 miles per hour. He said 55 per cent of all drivers measured in 1975 were exceeding the 55 mile per hour speed limit and 21 per cent were traveling faster than 60 miles per hour. Six per cent of the cars measured in 1975 were going over 65 miles per hour.

In contrast, the average speed in 1973 was 60.3 miles per hour. Seventy per cent of the drivers were going over 55 miles per hour, 50 per cent over 60 miles per hour and 31 per cent over 65 miles per hour, the highway administration says.

Preliminary speed information for the first quarter indicates that most drivers are in the 55 miles per hour to 60 miles per hour range, Jarima said.

Whatever effect the lower speeds may have had on gasoline consumption, they apparently have had a major effect on the nation's highway death toll.

Last year was the safest year in history for U.S. motorists, according to the National Safety Council. The highway death rate dropped to 3.5 deaths per every 100 million miles traveled, the lowest in the 52 years the organization has kept records. A total of 45,600 persons were killed in traffic accidents, the fewest deaths since 1963.

A spokesman for the organiation said the biggest reason for the drop in fatalities was the lower speeds.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration says about 12,700 persons were killed in traffic accidents during the first four months of this year.

'Tomorrow' show stem from Synder's career in California

NEW YORK (AP) — In December 1974, NBC brought anchorman-interviewer Tom Snyder to the East Coast to anchor the low-rated 6 p.m. local news show of NBC-owned WNBC here and do his 1 a.m. "Tomorrow" shows here.

Snyder had been anchoring an evening news show on NBC-owned KNBC in Burbank, Calif., since 1970, and began "Tomorrow" there in October 1973. He came here with a new contract reportedly paying him $475,000 annually.

So has the move paid off for NBC both on a national basis and in Fun City, the nation's largest and richest television market?

"There isn't any question about it — he's doubled the ratings," says Joe Bartleme, head of news operations at NBC's five owned and operated stations. He referred to Snyder's work at WNBC here.

For Robert T. Howard, head of the NBC Television network, the "Tomorrow" answer is yes, not so much in terms of ratings — the show has no network competition in its hour — as in terms of national advertising revenue for NBC and local revenue for local stations.

When the one-hour, Tuesday-through-Friday "Tomorrow" interview show began, it carried few commercials, which pay for the show, and a lot of public service announcements, which bring in no revenue.

"We expected it to go the first year in the red, but now it's profitable," said Howard, declining to say how profitable. "You've also got to realize that at the start local stations had a hard time selling it."

By that, he meant time sold to local sponsors, a problem NBC also had nationally.

He said now about 90 per cent of the available commercial time on the show has been sold, "business is good" for the 167 stations now airing the program, and national sponsors have bought about 80 per cent of the available "Tomorrow" time from next October through December

Before Snyder, 40, signed on to anchor the 6 p.m. segment of WNBC's two-hour local news show here, the station's ratings in that hour had been a poor third against competing news shows on WCBS and WABC.

According to an A. C. Nielsen spokesman, the three network-owned stations in this market of more than 6.3 million homes with TV sets were virtually tied in ratings last month for their 6 p.m. local news shows.

Howard said the two main reasons the flamboyant Snyder was brought to New York were (a) to replace Jim Hartz, then shifting from the local anchor job to "Today," and (b) to build up production in New York at NBC's Fun City studios, from where "Tomorrow" now originates.

Another factor in the "Tomorrow" shift, Howard said, was that the citizens Snyder interviews on the show usually are in the category of news, not Hollywood entertainment, and live here and in Washington, D.C.

Democrats platform calls for federal financing of the congressional elections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic platform committee has approved a proposed campaign plank calling for partial federal financing of congressional elections.

Supporters of the plan argued Monday night that the apparent success of this year's system for the presidential campaign showed the value of providing federal funds for congressional races.

Opponents, however, contended that the proposal could commit the federal government to heavy new expenditures it could not afford.

No price tag was given for the financing plan, which was approved by the platform panel on a 68 to 30 vote.

The 153-member committee is expected to complete work by Wednesday on a draft document aimed at embodying the party's over-all stance for the November elections. The draft platform will go before the Democratic National Convention in July for final approval.

Delegates to the platform conference also approved Monday a proposal calling for restoration of the postal service as a government agency, but later voted it down after being requested to reconsider by Jimmy Carter's chief representative.

Subsequently, the committee adopted a statement simply urging improvement in the postal service.

The platform committee also voted to support a ban on cheap handguns known as "Saturday night specials."

But at Eizenstat's urging, the committee voted down a proposed endorsement of measures sought by gay liberation groups, along with a bid to put the party on record as opposing capital punishment.

"We are going to run a race against a conservative Republican," the Carter representative said. "There is no need to give him unnecessary ammunition."

Earlier Monday, platform task forces weighed various other issues, taking actions which included:

—Softening defense language in the proposed platform and supporting a delay in any decision to produce the controversial B1 bomber.

—Recommending that the federal government finance a comprehensive national health insurance program providing full medical coverage for all Americans.

The proposal, however, did not describe in detail how such a comprehensive health care system would be funded.

—Amending a commitment to the security of South Korea by adding that the party "deplores the denial of human rights" in that country.

Carter continues to gain Missouri support

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Jimmy Carter, galloping toward the Democratic presidential nomination, has continued to pick up delegate support in Missouri despite the poor showing of his backers at the state convention, an Associated Press delegate poll shows.

But while the Carter bandwagon kept rolling Monday, California Gov. Edmund Brown, who urged state Democrats to remain uncommitted this weekend so the "process could remain open," picked up his first formal support from the 71-member Missouri delegation to the national convention next month in New York.

Carter, who gained only 11 of the 17 at-large delegates chosen Saturday as some party members balked at the call for Carter support by party leaders, gained three more delegates from the uncommitted ranks, according to the delegate poll.

The three latest switches to Carter bring to eight the total number of previously uncommitted Missouri delegates getting behind him in the past three days.

Brown, the only Democrat still actively pursuing the nomination, picked up the backing of two previously uncommitted delegates after telling party members here that "30 days before the convention seems to me a rather early point in time to totally and absolutely lock up the process."

A third uncommitted delegate has said he is leaning toward the California chief executive but has declined to make a formal commitment, saying, "We ought to see what he can do yet."

With the flurry of switches in first-ballot preference Monday, the AP talley of firm delegate support now stands at 48 for Carter, four each for Congressman Morris Udall of Arizona and pro-life candidate Ellen McCormack, two for Brown and one for Washington Sen. Henry Jackson. Missouri delegates are not legally bound to vote for their stated preference.

The remaining dozen delegates remained uncommitted although the names of two of them appeared on a statement in mid-May endorsing Carter and urging Missouri Democrats to get behind him.

State party leaders headed by U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton have predicted at least 60 members of the delegation will actually vote for Carter on the first ballot and some have estimated as high as 64.

Although recent events have all but assured Carter a first-ballot nomination, his campaign got another boost when Udall said his delegates could vote for any candidate they wanted. Udall did not formally release them, however, and that kept his support in Missouri solid at four.

"I've been instructed by my people to stay with Udall until we are released," one delegate said in an interview. Another said voting for Udall "will give the convention and the people to know there are people out there who want what he stands for and maybe we can get some of that written into the party platform."

State party Chairman John McIlroy, selected as an at-large Carter delegate over the weekend, said he expected many of the uncommitted delegates to eventually join the Carter camp but admitted that those now backing other candidates would be slower to come over.

"Once a person has gotten committed to a candidate, it's hard to face up to the fact that he's out of it," McIlroy said, "and they're especially slow to switch to the man who beat him out."

Some uncommitteds, however, have staunchly refused to step on the Carter bandwagon.

"People who selected me don't like Carter," one said while another added, "I would concede that it looks like Carter is going to be the nominee, but there are still things the leaders can do between now and New York that I would lik. to know about to base my decision on."

Sex scandal rages on in Washington

WASHINGTON (AP) Elizabeth Ray has told investigators she had sex on a houseboat with Sen. Mike Gravel after being told to do so by a congressman who wanted to influence Gravel's support for a public works project, a source close to the investigation said Saturday.

Miss Ray said her former boss, Rep. Kenneth J. Gray, since retired from Congress, told her to "take care of Gravel" at a small party aboard Gray's 50-foot River Queen houseboat on the Potomac River the night of Aug. 10, 1972, the source said.

The source said Miss Ray understood this to be an order for her to have sex with the senator. This was part of a pattern, the source said, in which Gray "pushed her off" on other men. The source said that Miss Ray claims at one point Gray threatened to fire her if she refused to have sex with a contractor whom she found repulsive.

According to the source, Miss Ray recalls that after her sexual encounter with Gravel, Gray told her: "That was for the National Visitors Center." The center, a $44 million parking and visitor information facility at Washington's Union Station near the Capitol, was one of Gray's pet public works projects.

Other sources say Miss Ray has told them much the same story.

Gray, an Illinois Democrat who retired last year, flatly denies the account. Gravel, a Democrat from Alaska, says he does not recall ever meeting Miss Ray.

Colleen Gardner, a 28-year-old divorcee who claims she was paid a high salary by Rep. John Young as a reward for providing him with sex, has told reporters she was an eyewitness to the sexual encounter between Miss Ray and Gravel.

Albert Ahern Jr., a lawyer for the 33-year-old Miss Ray, publicly supported Mrs. Gardner's account as "essentially accurate." Another source, who requested anonymity, said Miss Ray had boasted to a friend on Gray's congressional staff that she had sex with Gravel.

Ahern stressed that Mrs. Gardner had been the first to mention Gravel's name publicly in connection with the scandal. The attorney said Miss Ray "will not volunteer the names of those people with whom she had sexual relations."

The Justice Department and a grand jury are investigating Miss Ray's claim that Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, put her on the congressional payroll to provide him with sex. Hays, who hired her after she left Gray's staff in 1974 , concedes having had a "personal relationship" with her, but denies that her duties were sex.

Hays is recovering in Ohio from taking too many sleeping pills. The doctor says he does not know whether the overdose was a suicide attempt.

Richard Thornburgh, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, said it also will look into Mrs. Gardner's allegations that her $26,000 salary required her to have sex with Young. The Texas Democrat calls the claim "poppycock" but won't confirm or deny a sexual relationship with her.

Trader Finley dismantles A's

OAKLAND (AP) — Charles O. Finley is $3.5 million richer, but his once mighty Oakland A's are three more star players poorer and calling it the end of the championship line.

"We don't have much of a team anymore," conceded Sal Bando, an unclaimed item in the biggest one-day sale in baseball history. "But he built it. I guess he has a right to tear it down."

"There's no way those three can be replaced," said Gene Tenace, another survivor of the Tuesday night housecleaning in which Finley peddled left fielder Joe Rudi, relief pitching star Rollie Fingers and left-handed starter Vida Blue.

Rudi and Fingers were sold for $1 million each, moving from the Oakland clubhouse to the Boston locker room two hours before the game against the Red Sox, which the A's won 3-2 on the strength of Tenace's two home runs including one leading off the bottom of the ninth inning.

Blue went to the New York Yankees for, according to Finley, $1.5 million. Just before baseball's midnight trading deadline, the Yankees acquired Ken Holtzman in a nine-player deal with Baltimore, thereby reuniting the A's former pitching big three of Catfish Hunter, Blue and Holtzman.

Rudi, Fingers and Blue were among the seven unsigned players on the A's roster, and Finley said, "I made every effort to sign them, but when it got down to the last day, I had no alternatives."

When asked what he was left with, besides cash, Finley replied, "I don't even want to talk about that."

He sounded like a beaten man, one who had lost $3.5 million rather than gaining that amount. But later in the evening he vowed, "I'll rebuild. I'm going to use the money to buy players and I'm going to do it immediately."

Bando, Tenace and shortstop Bert Campaneris are the only remaining front-line players from the team that won world championships in 1972-73-74.

Hunter was the first to go, being declared a free agent after the 1974 season on the grounds Finley had breached his $100,000-a-year contract. Second baseman Dick Green retired, predicting correctly that the A's couldn't win another title without Hunter.

A few days before this season began, Finley traded slugger Reggie Jackson and Holtzman, both unsigned, to Baltimore for pitcher Mike Torrez, first baseman-outfielder Don Baylor and pitcher Paul Mitchell. Baylor is unsigned, as are Bando, Campaneris and Tenace, so could play out his option this year and move next spring.

"I can't see any reason to sign now," said Tenace.

Manager Chuck Tanner defended the owner's decision to sell, saying, "He did the best thing."

But Bando said, "I was shocked more than anything over the fact he took money instead of players. But he might have financial problems we don't know about."

And, shaking his head, he added, "He got $3.5 million for just three guys. They're paying $9 million for the new expansion teams."

Billy Williams of the A's said, "I can't figure it out, unless he doesn't want a team anymore."

But Tanner said, "I guarantee you Charlie Finley will be operating the A's in Oakland next season."

Johnson, sizing up his defending champs' chances of catching the frontrunning Yankees in the AL East, said, "We're both tremendously improved. We got what we wanted and they got what they wanted."

When asked where he'd use Rudi, with Jim Rice, Fred Lynn and Dwight Evans now comprising the outfield and Carl Yastrzemski holding down first base, Johnson replied, "I haven't had a minute to think about it."

The Yankees acquired pitchers Doyle Alexander and Grant Jackson and catcher Elrod Hendricks from Baltimore with Holtzman in exchange for pitchers Rudy May, Tippy Martinez, Scott MacGregor and Dave Pagan plus catcher Rick Dempsey. The sale of the three A's and the nine-player deal between Baltimore and New York were the big personnel shifts in baseball, but there was more shuffling.

Victorious Foreman looks to Ali

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — "I can whup any man I can hit — the Lord's always with the puncher -- and the man I want now is the champion."

Was Muhammad Ali, winging across the Pacific for his $6-million travesty against wrestler Antonio Anoki, listening?

The measured, confident words came from the unmarked lips of a new George Foreman after the one-time junevile delinquent from the streets of Houston hammered dead-game Joe Frazier into retirement with a fifth-round knockout Tuesday night at the half-filled Nassau Coliseum.

The end of the ballyhooed brawl between two slugging ex-champions came with stunning suddenness. The bull-strong, 27-year-old Foreman nailed Smokin' Joe with a whistling combination of punches midway in the fifth round, sending him to his hauches. Moments later, Foreman landed a left to the chin followed by a thunderbolt right.

Frazier fell against the padding in the corner of the ring, blood gushing from a cut over the right eye. He staggered to his feet at the count of seven, his legs rubbery anf his eyes glazed.

His concerned manager, Eddie Futch, rushed to the apron and whispered into the ear of Harold Valan, "Stop it, we've had enough."

Valan obliged. The time was 2:26 of the fifth — even at that more than twice as long as Smokin' Joe lasted on that historic night in Kingston, Jamaica Jan. 22, 1973, when Foreman, a 3-1 underdog, floored him six times before wresting the championship from him in less than two rounds.

"I wanted to keep fighting," Frazier said after Tuesday's defeat, which ended his ring career. "I begged Eddie to let me go on but Eddie always knows best."

Some 45 minutes after the fight had ended and the crowd had poured out of the Long Island arena, Frazier emerged from his dressing room, a patch covering a stitching job over his right eye, and announced:

"I guess it's time to hang the gloves on the wall ... From now on, it's boogie, boogie, boogie." Both he and Foreman were guaranteed a million dollars for the fight.

Foreman, grim and mechanically merciless, an awesome giant with deadly hitting power, is now intent on reclaiming the world crown he lost to the tricky, rope-swinging Ali in Kinshasha, Zaire Oct. 30, 1974.

It's the only fight Foreman has ever lost — and he admits the memory of it tears away at his innards.

"I want to be an active fighter, I'm ready to take on anybody, but I think I should fight the top challengers," the 6-foot-3 contender said.

"The man I want — and I think I deserve to get — is Muhammad Ali."

After Ali's burlesque act with Inoki in Tokyo June 25, the heavyweight king has a Sept. 28 date at Yankee Stadium with an old adversary, Ken Norton, who split two decisions with Ali, once breaking his jaw.

Ali is now 34 and beginning to show signs of advancing age. Assuming he gets by Norton and doesn't retire, as he has sometimes threatened, it is unlikely he could duck the rejuvenated Foreman without following Frazier's path into retirement.

E. Michigan moves past Arizona St.

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona State came to the 30th College World Series with 19 straight baseball victories, the favorite tag and a team batting average of .348.

Eastern Michigan left-hander Bob Owchinko changed all that in a little more than two hours Tuesday night with a masterful seven-hitter to give his club a 2-1 victory over top-rated Arizona State.

"Owchinko was just a much better pitcher than we've had to face in some time," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock. "When you sit back and analyze it, it was probably a super performance by him."

The victory left Eastern Michigan, 46-14, the only unbeaten among the four remaining series contenders and ended the possibility of an Arizona and Arizona State title game.

Arizona State, 64-9, tangles with Maine, 29-8, in a elimination game Wednesday night, while Arizona, 53-17, will try to stay alive against Eastern Michigan.

If the two Arizona schools are victorious, they would battle Thursday night and Eastern Michigan would receive the bye into the title game.

Eastern Michigan gave Owchinko plenty of support in the field, including three double plays.

All the game's runs came in the first three innings and what proved to be the winning tally came on an error.

How Arm & Hammer® Baking Soda helps maintain your pool's ideal pH and helps keep your water crystal clear.

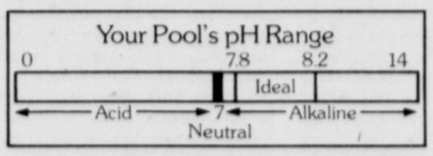
The 2 most important rules for easy pool care.

The most important rule to remember about pool care is to use a chlorinating product.

Recommended usage: Maintain a minimum chlorine level of 1.0 ppm Free Residual (Available) Chlorine.

The second most important rule to remember is to maintain the proper pH. And here's where Baking Soda goes to work. Baking Soda is a natural acid neutralizer and buffering agent which helps maintain pool pH at an ideal range of 7.8 to 8.2. This helps keep eyes from burning. And Baking Soda even helps improve water clarity—keeping your pool water crystal clear.

Recommended usage: Add 1 lb. of Baking Soda per 10,000 gallons of water each week during active pool season. Add a chlorinating product as needed.



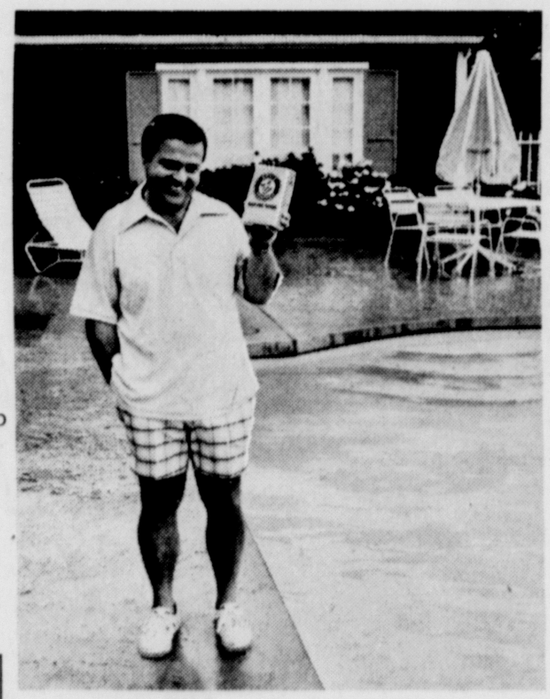
If pH reaches 8.2, you can discontinue weekly use of Baking Soda and use only as necessary to maintain a pH within 7.8 to 8.2. Do not use Acid. If cloudiness occurs, run filter (keeping it clean), until pool water clears.

How Baking Soda helps keep the water clear

Your pool water is filled with tiny particles too small for your filter to remove. Some of these particles make the water cloudy. Baking Soda causes the smallest particles to become attached to larger ones which are then easily filtered out of the water. The result is crystal clear water. If cloudiness occurs when you add Baking Soda, run the filter (keeping it clean), until pool water clears.

How Baking Soda helps keep eyes from burning

When eyes sting or burn and chlorine odors can be detected from the pool water, the problem is usually one of low pH. A low pH promotes the formation of irritating chlorine-nitrogen by-products. The best way to minimize the formation of these irritating by-products is to control the pH of your pool water.



"Arm & Hammer Baking Soda is a pool owner's best friend."

By maintaining your pool's pH with Baking Soda, you automatically adjust the pH of your pool water into the ideal range of 7.8 to 8.2. As a result, eye irritation is kept to a minimum.

6 Rules for Pool Maintenance

1. Test water daily.
2. Daily chlorine measurements should be taken to assure proper germicidal activity. Free Residual (Available) Chlorine should be 1.0 ppm or above.
3. Maintain pH between 7.8 and 8.2. Once every week during active pool season use 1 lb. of Arm & Hammer Baking Soda for every 10,000 gallons of water.
4. Check filter regularly. Clean when necessary.
5. Check water hardness monthly, particularly in hard water areas. High water hardness may cause scaling. If total water hardness (as calcium carbonate) is above 300 ppm, do not use Baking Soda until pool has been drained and refilled.
6. If heater is used: Operate filter at least 15 minutes after heater is turned off.

Note: On occasion, particularly in a new pool or in pools being opened for the season, additional steps are required to bring the pool into balance more rapidly or to clear up problems such as algae growth or mineral accumulation. When these problems arise consult a pool expert in your area.

Test Kits

An accurate Test Kit is very important to avoid inaccurate readings which can cause problems in proper pool maintenance. Testing solutions should be replaced at least once every year.

How to estimate your pool's capacity

The average swimming pool contains approximately 20,000 gallons. However, an accurate record of the pool's water capacity in gallons is necessary since this measurement is often used to calculate amounts of chemicals for treating the pool water.

The following formulas can be used to approximate the total gallons of water a pool will hold.

Type Pool	Dimensions in feet	Gallon Capacity
Rectangular	Length x Width x Avg. Depth x 7.5 =
Circular	Diameter x Dia. x Avg. Depth x 4.7 =
Oval	Length x Width x Avg. Depth x 4.7 =

Lowly Cardinals again rally but fall one run short, 5-4

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Lefthander Mike Beard is tickled he's back in the major leagues and so are the Atlanta Braves.

The young relief pitcher, who protested bitterly when sent to Richmond of the International League two months ago, Tuesday night celebrated his return by saving a 5-4 Braves victory over the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I was disappointed because I felt like I'd earned a chance," said Beard, who in April used a stronger choice of words.

"It's hard for a manager with only two weeks of spring training to form his team," he conceded, however, in retrospect. "I felt bad, but they told me I'd be back. Now it's up to me to prove I'm good enough to stay."

For Beard, a more acid test of his mettle could hardly have been devised than the task which confronted him in the St. Louis ninth.

Then, after relievers Adrian Devine and Max Leon swung the door open for the Cards with a walk and a pitch hit for a single, he was asked to shut it.

He induced Jerry Mumphrey to hit into a force play at second base as Mike Tyson scored and, after pinch-hitter Mike Anderson lined out, worked around a walk to Bake McBride to seal the triumph.

Royals fatten B.A.'s at expense of Detroit

DETROIT (AP) — Another couple touchdowns and the Detroit Lions might have pulled it out Tuesday night against the Kansas City Chiefs.

Touchdowns? Lions? Chiefs?

Whoops, check that. It was baseball they were playing Tuesday night at Tiger Stadium and the clubs involved were the Kansas City Royals and Detroit Tigers.

But then again, perhaps it was slow pitch softball?

At any rate, the Royals slaughtered the Tigers 21-7.

Kansas City shelled four Detroit pitchers for 24 hits to eclipse the KC record of 22 set May 12 against Minnesota.

A ninth-inning thunderstorm, which ended the game a bit prematurely, may have saved the Tigers from giving up the most runs in a game in their 76-year history, and the most hits.

The record for runs against Detroit is 24 by the Philadelphia Athletics in 1912 and most hits allowed were 27 by Boston in 1953.

Just think. A victory would have been the 6,000th in Tiger history!

They'll try for that again tonight when they send their No. 1 pitching asset, rookie Mark "Bird" Fidrych, to the mound against Doug Bird. "Bird" will be trying to raise his record to 5-1, while Bird tries to give KC a sweep of the three-game series, extend its winning string to eight and raise his record to 8-1.

Kansas City had 15 runs and 18 hits after four innings, scoring five in the second off Dave Lemanczyk (making his season debut), four in the third off Bill Laxton and Ray Bare, and six in the fourth off Bare and Steve Grilli.

"I couldn't believe it," said Royals third baseman George Brett, who leads the American League in hits with 85. "It was getting funnier with every hit. I've never seen a barrage like that."

Brett was one of the lighter KC hitters. He only had four singles in seven at bats, with just one run-batted-in.

Outfielder Tom Poquette, the No. 7 batter in the lineup, led with a 5-for-6 night, five runs scored and two RBI. He had two doubles, two singles and an inside-the-park home run — when centerfielder Ron LeFlore slipped and fell in the seventh inning.

Leadoff batter Dave Nelson was no slouch. He had three singles in 3½ innings. The first drove in a run in the second, the next sent in two in the third and the last scored one in the fourth.

No. 2 batter Amos Otis walked twice, singled in a run in the second, hit a three-run homer in the fourth and a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Tony Solaita wasn't to be left out. He hit a two-out, bases-loaded popup that scored three runs in the eighth. The wind blew the ball away from third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez and Solaita doubled his season's RBI output.

Fred Patek singled in a run in both the third and fourth innings for the Royals. John Mayberry had an RBI single and KC catcher Buck Martinez had a single, double, triple and one RBI.

One run scored on an error.

Would you believe, Detroit led 2-0 after one inning? Alex Johnson singled in a run and Bill Freehan hit a sacrifice fly.

St. Louis-Saints game called off

The Sikeston Saints fame with the St. Louis Saints, scheduled for tonight at V. F. W. Stadium, has been called off and will be rescheduled at some yet-to-be-determined date. The next game for the 1-5 ballclub will be this Saturday at Cairo, Illinois, in a 4 p.m., non-league affair.

The Saints announced some good news today. With erratic hurling hindering the team's performance greatly, two new pitchers have been added to the roster. Don Miller and Mike Foster, a pair of righthanders will join the team soon and try to take some of the pressure off the overworked pitching staff. Miller's brother, Charlie, has been lost to the squad for the remainder of the season because of a separated right shoulder. Charlie Miller was one of the team's regular catchers.

Investors seek to save Scouts

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A last-gasp purchase proposition by a new group of investors to save the Kansas City Scouts from National Hockey League oblivion will be made next Monday night to the present ownership, a spokesman says.

Gene Novorr, a Kansas City clothier who represents the rescue effort, said Tuesday, "The banks have made it clear that they would be 100 per cent behind us, and the city has been very helpful. I can't see one hitch right now."

The Scouts, a two-year expansion franchise, are said to be $5 million in debt from dwindling attendance and sparse finances.

The NHL has given the city until the next league meeting June 25 to come up with a plan to refinance the Scouts, or the franchise will be dissolved.

Novorr said the proposal to be presented to Edwin Thompson, president of the team, will be the same offered by the Kansas City Kings of the National Basketball Association last month.

The Kings backed out when the city refused to grant them a lease escape clause in the event the Scouts proved too expensive to preserve. Novorr said the city has agreed to such a clause with his group.

If an agreement can be reached and the NHL approves, the Scouts still must keep its players from straying in the meantime.

Novorr said he has contacted six who played out their options last seasons and became free agents, Guy Charron, Denis Herron, Craig Patrick, Chuck Arnason, Jean-Guy Lagace and Gary Bergman.

"We hope they'll hold off making any move until our reorganization iscomplete," he said.

Smith traded to Dodgers for Joe Ferguson

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Joe Ferguson has been itching to get back behind the plate, and the Los Angeles Dodgers have been looking for some lefthanded power.

Ferguson may be getting his wish with the St. Louis Cardinals, to whom he was traded Tuesday night for switch-hitting outfielder Reggie Smith, who the Dodgers hope will fill their need for some gusto on the left side of the plate.

"He's going to play well for (the Dodgers)," said Cardinal Manager Red Schoendienst after the trade, just hours before the midnight deadline.

"He's been close to a .300 hitter every year in the past and I imagine he'll get a lot of hits this year."

Smith, who has agreed to terms with the Dodgers, was batting .218, with eight homers and 23 RBI this season.

Schoendienst was glad to have Ferguson, saying "The big thing is, he wants to catch. There are very few catchers around, and I think we're lucky to get one of his ability. It will make us more flexible with three catchers (Ferguson, Ted Simmons and Ker Rudolph)."

Ferguson was expected to share catching duties with Simmons, who will be shifted to first base duties when the Cards are facing left-handed pitchers.

In St. Louis, Smith said, "I wasn't happy when they first came to me but I am now. Under the circumstances and the way things have been going, I think the trade was dictated.

"I'm glad they (the Cards) gave me a chance to okay it. I was scratched from the line-up and Mr. (Bing) Devine came to me and told me about it. The Dodgers had asked him for permission to talk to me, but nothing was concrete until almost the 11th hour.

"I will be playing right field, and for that I'm thankful. "I just talked to my wife and she said you always have to feel things are going to work out for the best."

NBA-ABA merger talks continuing

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — The National Basketball Association's Advisory Board, having met with representatives of the American Basketball Association, was expected to continue merger talks with the young league about accepting four teams, although an ABA owner suggested that a six-team concept would make far more sense and eliminate many problems.

The top officials from both leagues met for about 2½ hours Tuesday night and both sides emerged from this session with mixed feelings.

One NBA source said his league's Advisory Board was not satisfied with the ABA's proposal and financial status and would present a negative report to the NBA's Board of Governors.

However, Jim Keeler, assistant to ABA Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, was far more optimistic. Keeler said the leagues had narrowed the estimated 100-110 issues in dispute between the NBA-ABA as described by NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien to about 20-30.

"I feel the meeting was very meaningful," said Keeler. "I am very encouraged."

Bill Alverson, owner of the Milwaukee Bucks and a member of the NBA's five-man Advisory Board, echoed Keeler's sentiments.

"They (the ABA) came to play ball," said Alverson. "But a merger is by no means certain. We are going back to our Board of Governors for direction."

Approval by 14 members of the 18-man Board of Governors is necessary to accept any new members. O'Brien, who had said earlier Tuesday he believed that a four-team merger plan was most acceptable to both leagues, emerged from the late high-level session with little comment.

"We're still working at it," he said tersely.

DeBusschere was more effusive but little more enlightening on the subject. "I can't say I am terribly optimistic and I can't say I am terribly pessimistic," said the young ABA commissioner. "I am in the middle. I don't know what is going to happen."

The four-team plan would involve taking in franchises from Denver, Indiana, New York and San Antonio for the 1976-77 season, leaving Kentucky and St. Louis-Utah in the cold.

Ozzie Silna, principal owners of the St. Louis-Utah club and an uninvited guest at these NBA summer meetings, said, "The easiest thing for both parties, would be a six-team deal.

"There's no way thay are going to work out a four-team deal," insisted Silna, while pinpointing all the problems that would exist if such a plan was adopted.

Silna, in the process of moving his franchise from St. Louis to Utah because of the Spirits' failure to attract fans last year, said the roadblocks included a lawsuit by the ABA Players' Association, two suits by the city of Buffalo against the NBA, the problem of dispersal of ABA players from the two franchises not included in the four-team plan, and other pending litigation.

Blues trade Wilson

ST. LOUIS— The St. Louis Blues today sent defenseman Rick Wilson to the Detroit Red Wings. The transaction completes the deal made at the trade deadline last season when the Blues picked up goalie Doug Grant from Detroit on March 9 for future considerations. Grant saw no action with the Blues last season. Wilson was with the Blues for two seasons coming here from Montreal along with Montreal's fifth round draft choice in the 1974 Amateur Draft for St. Louis' fourth choice in the same draft and a player to be named later (Glen Sather, June 14, 1974) on May 27, 1974.

Letter to the Editor

Editor,
The Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Mo. 63801

Dear Sir,

The public is not getting the whole truth on ERA demonstrations being held over the country. The media is not telling who organizes and leads these rallies and who participates in them.

The May 16 demonstration in Illinois was planned, organized and led by the National Organization for Women, (NOW). The radical and anti-family tactics and objectives of NOW are clearly spelled out in its own publication called "Revolution: Tomorrow is NOW" Here are something the pamphet shows NOW is for:

1. Abortion mandated in all hospitals, financed by the government and taught in all public schools.

2. Taxpayer- financed state kiddy-care centers for all children.

3. Pro-lesbian legislation so that perverts will be given the same legal rights as husbands and wives, such as right to get marriage licenses, to file joint income tax returns and to adopt children.

4. NOW's primary legislative goal is ratification of the E qual Rights Amendment.

5. NOW is trying to change the school textbooks so as to promote a "gender free" unisex society.

6. NOW wants to force the churches to ordain women and is even working to deprive the Catholic Church of its tax exemption.

7. NOW women hate veterans and are working actively to eliminate all veterans' preference.

Before the people of the 159th District grant another hitch to Congressman Cline, it might be well to ask if he has changed his mind on ERA, which he voted FOR in the Missouri legislature.

Even the above doesn't tell it all, however, because it doesn't reveal the obscene language and foul four-letter words that are part of the everyday language of the women's lib movement.

'Nuff said!

Dear Editor,

I enjoy your "Mini Pages". My name is Yvette Sherman I'm 11 years old I go to Masterson Shcool. I like them so much because they have such interesting articals & fun puzzles. There's one artical I like it was about Archaeology because my girlfriend (Lisa Hardy) and I want to be archaeologist. I'm sending her a copy of it. Oh, the reason I get the Mini Page is because my grandmother saves them for me. You've helped me alot in Math because you had an artical on the Metric System, my math teacher gave me some points for showing it to her and believe me I needed it (I was in the M range). I was wondering if you would put it in the paper? And keep putting it in the paper I hope alot of kid the kids like it. Thank You for reading this letter.

Sincerly

Yvette Sherman

Keep pets away from fireworks

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. — The Bicentennial observances that will take place throughout the United States on the Fourth of July will be a source of joy to Americans but a possible source of misery to their pets, reports the Gaines Dog Research Center.

Firecrackers are a traditional highlight of Fourth of July celebrations in many sections of the country, the Center notes. Dogs, with their extra-sensitive hearing, are likely to become terror-stricken when firecrackers begin exploding nearby.

No dog owner should deliberately expose a dog to a noisy celebration on the theory that the animal will "get used to it" and settle down after a few minutes. It's much more likely that the dog will become a nervous wreck before the end of the day. Puppies are particularly susceptible. Exposure to such noises could make a puppy fearful of sudden sounds for the rest of his life.

During the 1976 observance, the noise level is likely to be higher than ever, the center notes. As a favor to the family pet, keep him as far as possible from the source of the noise, preferably in a closed room or in a basement.

Ozark Air Lines is fined by the FAA

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Ozark Air Lines, Inc., has been fined $500 for failing to take proper security precautions in a flight from Columbia, Mo., to St. Louis.

The ruling was made Tuesday by Chief U.S. District Judge James H. Meredith on a civil suit brought against Ozark by the Federal Aviation Administration last September.

TV violence may hurt the advertisers business

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the nation's largest advertising agency says a survey conducted for his agency shows that many television viewers are turning off violent TV programs and may also be rejecting the products advertised on those programs.

Don Johnston, president of the J. Walter Thompson, Co. said a poll conducted in March shows that 10 per cent of viewers apparently consider not buying products because they are advertised on programs they consider excessively violent.

Eight per cent reported "consciously not buying a product," he told the annual convention of the American Advertising Federation here Tuesday.

He said that even if subsequent polls show only 4 per cent of viewers reject products because they are advertised in connection with violence, "I cannot imagine any advertiser who would want to risk negative sales of these proportions."

Johnston said the survey, although preliminary, corroborates other indications "that public hostility to violent TV programming is growing ..."

He said the J. Walter Thompson agency is "counselling our clients to evaluate the potential negatives of placing commercials in programming perceived as violent." Opponents of TV violence are organizing, he said, and Johnston predicted their actions will be felt "more and more ... in letters of protest and in product boycotts."

Johnston also said he personally opposes excessive violence on TV, and so does the agency.

"We are questioning that part of TV programming that exploits violence," he said. "We believe it is socially and psychologically damaging to large sections of the population."

Johnston said the agency's poll was conducted among 200 adult TV viewers. He said the agency has decided to expand the survey "to verify the preliminary results."

Among these results, he said, is that two of every five persons said they avoid watching programs they consider too violent.

Also, one of every five men and one of every three women said they prevent their children from watching programs they thought were excessively violent, he added.

Johnston said the agency's analysis of existing scientific and social research on TV violence reveals the following areas where it believes "damage is caused."

—"If they (children) are constantly given models of violent behavior, their behavior will probably turn violent."

—Incidents have been reported in which unstable adults have modeled crimes on television dramas."

—"Excessive doses of violence tend to desentitize even stable adults. They become indifferent to the suffering of others."

—"Heavy watching of TV violence contributes to the tide of paranoia that afflicts a major part of the population ... Caution is a useful emotion. Terror is not."

What's the law?

The case of the air pollutant law

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

Fearful that oxygen would be air today and gone tomorrow, a county antipollution law was passed that prohibited the idling of motor vehicle engines for more than a three-minute period of time -- with certain exceptions. Almost immediately upon the law's enactment, Jake's Bus Company was slapped with a summons for violating the new law.

"When we walked into his garage," two police officers testified in court, "Jake's buses were just idling idyllically".

"Of course they were," responded Jake. "You can't just keep turning bus engines on and off every three minutes. Birds got to fly and motor vehicles got to idle -- that's the nature of things. Consequently, the new antipollution law is invalid and I can't be convicted of violating it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the challenged law and convict Jake of violating it?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that the law placed too oppressive a burden on the public for the insignificant effect it might have on air pollution. Heaters, defrosters and air conditioners could not be used to keep warm or cold while cars were not moving, school buses could not stop for students for more than 180 seconds, motorists stalled in traffic jams would have to run their engines on and off every three minutes, etc. What is more, noted the judge, it is logical to conclude that engines burn less gasoline and emit less combustion when vehicles are standing still than when they are moving.

Dr. Lamb

Child's blood: link to parents

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Recently on a television program a man said that a child had to have the same blood type as one or the other of the parents. Is this true?

I am a man 69 years old and was married 38 years and we had three children. Our marriage was fairly good but we had some differences stemming from her previous marriage which resulted in three children.

My blood type is O positive and hers A positive. Two of my children had my blood type and they resembled me both in looks and make-up. The other child did not follow either my blood type or his mother's but had a rare type of blood (two letters and a negative). He also looked different. Could this mean I am not his father?

This son is married and has four children. I love him, always have and always will and this secret, if it is a secret,will die with me. He shall never know.

My wife has been dead for four years now and I have not and will not marry again. I hold nothing against her in any way and expect to meet her again in heaven. Can you give me any positive answer or literature that would settle this question?

DEAR READER — The problem of blood types and parentage is sufficiently complicated that I think people should rely on their doctor for an explanation. In the first place, we all have two genes to make up our blood type. Your wife, for example, must have been AO not just A. Both of your blood type genes are O. Some people consider type O as a neutral or no blood type. That is because the red blood cells contain no substance for blood typing. A parent transmits only one of his or her genes to the offspring. The O gene is the weak gene. So an AO and BO couple (classed as type A and type B) could have a child with type A, B, AB or O blood.

You are talking about the Rh factor. Both you and your wife were Rh positive. Most of the children from such a union would be Rh positive but you also have two genes for the Rh factor. There is a dominant gene (D) and a weak gene (d) and each parent transmits only one of the genes to the child. Hence, if both parents were DD (Rh positive) all the children would be. If both were dd (Rh negative) all the children would be dd or Rh negative.

The complexity occurs when both parents have Dd (also Rh positive) paired genes. On a chance basis one child will be DD (Rh negative). This is how two Rh positive (Dd parents) have an Rh negative offspring.

To give you more information about the standard blood types, Rh factor and blood transfusions I am sending you The Health Letter number 6-4. Other readers who want this information can forward 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, San Antonio, TX 78292.

If the information you have given me is correct I would assume your son is either type A Rh negative or type O Rh negative. And he would be your son even though he has Rh negative blood.

Love is not based on genes. Parents can and do love an adopted child as much or more than one with their own genes. The important thing in your relationship with your son is that he is a product of your own loving upbringing. Nothing can change that. Knowing that he can have a different blood type than the Rh positive type you and your wife had may help you feel better about your relationship with your late wife.

Mary Hartman to return for 2nd year

NEW YORK (AP) — It's official now. Producer Norman Lear will offer a second season of his hit "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" satire-and-soap opera series, still selling it on a syndicated, non-network basis.

There'd been some question whether his saga of life in Fernwood, Ohio, would return, as the five-show-a-week series had run its first season in the red — $1.2 million worth of red, by one estimate.

But Lear, in town this week on business, said the stations buying a second MH, MH season have been so willing to "escalate" the fees they formerly paid for the show that the fiscal outlook is rosy indeed.

He insisted he didn't know what the series would cost next season.

But he said the new fees paid by purchasing stations are such that "we're pretty confident we'll make up the losses this year, be able to pay the escalations (higher salaries) of the actors — everyone deserves a raise and every show in television faces that each year — and we also hope to make a profit."

He said 45 stations already have signed up for a second "Hartman" season and that another 45 are negotiating to buy, all of them stations that carried the series this season.

"And there are new stations coming in, so we think more than 100 stations will be showing the program next fall," he added.

He said taping will begin in early August, the showings in early October.

Unlike the first season, in which there were 26 weeks of first-run episodes and 13 weeks of reruns, season No. 2 will serve up 39 weeks of new shows followed by a 13-week repeat cycle, Lear said.

He said actress Louise Lasser, 37, the deadpan star of the show, and all the other regulars on this season's episodes will be back next fall, with some new characters introduced to ease their workload.

Miss Lasser, who made headlines in May when arrested on a cocaine possession charge after a disturbance in a Beverly Hills, Calif., boutique, currently is in a six-month, court-ordered drug diversion program.

Diversion is a California drug education program in which criminal proceedings against first offenders are dropped if they successfully complete the program.

Lear, asked whether her arrest and participation in the program will have any effect on the "Hartman" production for next season, said "we don't anticipate any problems."

Ten years ago: 20 persons were killed and 40 hurt in the collision of two tankers in New York harbor.

Five years ago: An El Greco painting, stolen in Spain in the 1930s, was found in New York City by the FBI.

(Eds: no birthdays of note)

Thought for today: It is wrong to assume that men of immense wealth are always happy — John D. Rockefeller Sr., 1839-1937.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, a large British transport and a brig were seized in Boston harbor after a sharp engagement.
